Liability of Online Marketplaces – New Legislation and Current Practice

James L. Bikoff, Partner – Smith, Gambrell & Russell, LLP
Impact of COVID-19 on e-commerce

• The COVID-19 pandemic has significantly accelerated digital transformations and, in particular, led to a major surge in e-commerce.

• According to the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development (UNCTAD) and eTrade report COVID-19 and E-Commerce: A Global Review, there is a strong uptake of e-commerce across regions, with consumers in emerging economies making the greatest shift to online shopping.

• For example, China's online retail sales rose from 19.4% to 24.6% between August 2019 and August 2020.

• The trend towards e-commerce uptake seen in 2020 is likely to be sustained during recovery, the report says.
Risks caused by the surge of e-commerce (continued)

- E-commerce platforms rely on third-party vendors, and their websites actively seek to enable trade between them and customers to increase overall website traffic. Such platforms have become major facilitators of illicit product trade due to minimal verification carried out on vendors. This issue has been raised long before the pandemic, and it has brought a series of court cases against e-commerce platforms resulting in different liability regimes depending on the activity undertaken or not undertaken by the platform in regards to a third party's illicit product.

- In all countries, the COVID-19 pandemic has reinforced the importance of addressing barriers to e-commerce to leverage the benefits that can be derived from it and cope with the potential downsides of digital transformation.
Risks caused by the surge of e-commerce

• To address this issue, legislators in the E.U. and the U.S. have introduced different bills on these topics.
NEW LEGISLATION
The Shop Safe Act is a bipartisan bill introduced in the House of Representatives on March 2, 2020.

- This bill establishes that an electronic commerce platform shall be liable for trademark infringement by a third-party seller of goods that implicate health and safety unless the platform takes certain actions.

- Specifically, the platform may be contributorily liable if the seller uses a counterfeit mark in connection with selling, offering, or advertising such goods on the platform.
The platform may avoid such liability by taking certain actions, including:

1. Requiring the seller to be available for service of process in the United States.
2. Verifying the seller's identity and contact information.
3. Requiring the seller to agree to not use counterfeit marks with goods sold on the platform.
4. Implementing technical measures to prescreen listings on the platform and remove listings or goods being sold with a counterfeit mark.
5. Implementing policies to remove and ban repeat offenders.
The Integrity, Notification, and Fairness in Online Retail Marketplaces Consumers Act (INFORM) was introduced in the Senate on March 23, 2021.

This bill requires online marketplaces to disclose to consumers basic information about high-volume third-party sellers, including the seller's name and address, email address, and telephone number. Violators would be subject to civil penalties.

High-volume third-party sellers are defined in the Act as vendors who have made at least 200 sales totaling at least $5,000 over a 1-year period.

In addition, the proposed legislation requires online marketplaces to provide customers with a hotline to report spurious activity, i.e., the sale of counterfeit, stolen, or otherwise dangerous merchandise.
E.U.: The Digital Services Act (DSA) (continued)

• The European Commission proposed two legislative initiatives: the Digital Services Act (DSA) and Digital Markets Act (DMA)

• Both bills were submitted to the European Parliament and the European Council on 15 December 2020. They encompass a single set of new rules applicable across the whole E.U. to create a safer and more open digital space.

• The rules specified in the DSA primarily concern online intermediaries and platforms, including online marketplaces and social networks, while the DMA primarily governs online gatekeeper platforms.
E.U.: The Digital Services Act (DSA)

- The DSA introduces the following requirements for online platforms:
  1. Publishing the parameters of the algorithms used for content moderation (automated removal of illicit content) and targeted advertisement
  2. Establishing an “effective internal complaint-handling system, which enables the consumer complaints to be lodged electronically and free of charge”
  3. Additional requirements regarding content moderation and targeted advertisements for "very large" platforms (having more than 45 million users).

- If platforms fail to comply with the regulations stipulated by the DSA, they could be subject to fines of up to 10 percent of global revenue in the case of repeat offenders
NEW CASE LAW
Plaintiff Angela Bolger bought a replacement laptop computer battery on the online shopping website operated by defendant Amazon.com, LLC. Several months after it was shipped to Bolger from the Amazon warehouse, the battery exploded, causing severe burns to her as a result.

The lower court granted Amazon's motion for summary judgment on the basis that Amazon did not manufacture or sell the battery.

However, the California Court of Appeals reversed the decision. It stated, "whatever term we use to describe Amazon's role, be it retailer, distributor, or merely facilitator, it was pivotal in bringing the product here to the consumer." Amazon's appeal to the California Supreme Court was refused, creating a pathway for other state and federal decisions holding Amazon and other online marketplaces liable for defective products sold by third-party sellers on its platforms.
• Eighteen-year-old Logan Stiner died after ingesting a fatal dose of caffeine powder that he obtained from his friend, K.K. His friend purchased the caffeine powder on Amazon. After K.K. gave some caffeine powder to Logan, he died of cardiac arrhythmia and seizures from acute caffeine toxicity.

• Dennis Steiner, the administrator of Logan's estate, brought this action against Amazon, alleging claims under the Ohio Products Liability Act (enacted in 1988) and the Ohio Pure Food and Drug Act.

• The Ohio Supreme Court ruled that under Ohio's Products Liability Act, Amazon could not be held liable because it did not meet the required definition of a "supplier" of the caffeine powder.
• The claimant, Coty Germany GmbH (Coty), is a perfume distributor and licensee of the E.U. trademark DAVIDOFF.

• Coty filed a trademark infringement claim against Amazon (i.e. Amazon's affiliates in the E.U.) before The Landgericht requesting the defendants to be ordered to desist, in the course of trade, from stocking or dispatching 'Davidoff Hot Water' brand perfumes in Germany or from causing them to be stocked or dispatched, if those goods were not put on the Union market with Coty's consent.
E.U.: Coty Germany GmbH v. Amazon Services Europe Sàrl

- The action was dismissed at first instance and on appeal, but Coty appealed further on the point of law to the Federal Court. The Federal Court sought the CJEU's input regarding the proper interpretation of Article 9 EUTMR:
  - 'Does a person who, on behalf of a third party, stores goods which infringe trademark rights, without having knowledge of that infringement, stock those goods for the purpose of offering them or putting them on the market, if it is not that person himself but rather the third party alone which intends to offer the goods or put them on the market?'

- The Court of Justice of the European Union (CJEU) held that Amazon was storing the goods without any interest to offer them or put them on the market (or to control these activities).
E.U. vs. U.S.: Differences in perceiving the role of online marketplaces in E-commerce

E.U.: Online marketplace is just an intermediary, and thus, it cannot be directly liable

U.S.: 'Whatever term we use to describe Amazon's role, be it retailer, distributor, or merely facilitator, it was pivotal in bringing the product here to the consumer' (Bolger v. Amazon.com, LLC 431, 438, Patricia Guerrero)

“DIGITAL COPYRIGHT ACT”
(discussion draft issued by Sen. Thomas Roland Tillis, R-N.C.)

A proposed re-write of DMCA Section 512 Safe Harbors for OSPs

Barry Werbin, Esq.
Herrick, Feinstein LLP

Section 512 online service provider (OSP) safe harbor was enacted in 1998 as part of Digital Millennium Copyright Act (DMCA). Created a system intended at the time to foster the growth of what was then a burgeoning internet economy, by balancing rights of copyright owners and OSPs respecting infringement, including qualified limitations on OSP liability respecting transmission, publication and storage of content posted by third parties.
DMCA – 17 USC § 512

OSP SAFE HARBORS

- OSPs must register DMCA agents with Copyright Office for “take down” notices.
- Rights owners issuing takedown notices must specify the web page and specific infringing content.
- Counternotification process by end user who posted content.
- OSP must adopt and inform users of “repeat infringer” termination policies.
- OSP safe harbors cover transmission, caching and storage of content at the direction of a user:
  - For storage of content at the direction of a user: OSP either does not have actual knowledge of infringing activity or is “not aware of facts or circumstances from which infringing activity is apparent” (i.e., no “red flag” knowledge or “willful blindness”).
  - OSPs transmitting, routing, or providing connections (“transitory digital networks”) are protected if the transmission was (i) initiated by a third party, (ii) carried out through automatic technical process w/o selection or modification of content by OSP, (iii) OSP does not select the recipients, and (iv) copy is not maintained on the system except for limited time to permit access by recipient. Similar qualifications apply to intermediate or temporary storage of content being transmitted. NOTE no knowledge qualifiers.
Courts have held that “red flag knowledge” arises only when an OSP is aware of facts that would have made it objectively obvious to a reasonable person that a specific piece of content was an infringement:

- Viacom Int’l, Inc. v. YouTube, Inc., 676 F.3d 19, 31 (2d Cir. 2012) (rejected argument that “actual” and “red flag” knowledge referred to “specific” and “generalized” knowledge respectively).

- UMG Recordings, Inc. v. Shelter Capital Partners LLC, 718 F.3d 1006, 1025 (9th Cir. 2013) (actual and red flag knowledge have subjective and objective standards, respectively, citing Viacom).

- Capitol Records v. Vimeo, LLC, 826 F.3d 78 (2nd Cir 6/16/16): “Red flag” knowledge did not exist where Vimeo’s employees viewed certain user-uploaded videos containing all or substantially all of recognizable copyrighted songs. This was insufficient to make infringement obvious to a reasonable person who wasn’t a music or copyright expert.

- EMI Christian Music Grp., Inc. v. MP3tunes, LLC, 844 F.3d 79, 92–93 (2d Cir. 2016): MP3tunes did not qualify for safe harbor where it actively encouraged infringement, including urging users to upload/download specific copyrighted works and burn such works to DVDs.
“The Copyright Office concludes that the operation of the section 512 safe harbor system today is unbalanced. In its examination of the balance established by Congress, the Office outlines five principles that guided its review, identifies its findings, and makes several recommendations for Congress to consider. The Report highlights areas where current implementation of section 512 is out of sync with Congress’ original intent, including: eligibility qualifications for the service provider safe harbors; repeat infringer policies; knowledge requirement standards; specificity within takedown notices; non-standard notice requirements; subpoenas; and injunctions. While the Office is not recommending any wholesale changes to section 512, the Report points out these and other areas where Congress may wish to consider legislation to rebuild the original balance between rightsholders and online service providers.”

PROPOSED DIGITAL COPYRIGHT ACT (“DCA”):
SEN. THOM. TILLIS (R-N.C.), CHAIRMAN SENATE JUDICIARY INTELLECTUAL PROPERTY SUBCOMMITTEE (RELEASED DEC. 22, 2020)

- Would rewrite DMCA 512 to limit OSP’s safe harbor defense and reduce notification obligations for copyright rights owners, including replacing existing notice-and-takedown process with “notice-and-staydown” process for complete and near complete works.
- Would adopt Copyright Office 2015 recommendations on orphan works to limit liability for good faith content users who, after diligent searches, cannot locate a copyright owner.
- Would move Copyright Office to the Executive Branch and make the Register of Copyright a presidential appointee requiring Senate approval.
- Would modernize Section 1210 circumvention of technological measures exemptions to (i) extend them to third parties who assist at the direction of an exempt group of end users (e.g., farmers who need their trucks repaired); and (ii) make permanent the exemptions for visually blind/impaired using assistive technologies; unlocking used mobile devices; and diagnosing and repairing computer programs.
- Require copyright owners to affix copyright management information (CMI) to digital copies with author attribution and give such authors private right of action.
- Adjudication of certain “small claims” by a copyright small claims tribunal.
- Require Copyright Office to permit application corrections where good faith errors occurred.
- Would allow for group registration of both published and unpublished works.
OSPs would not be liable for infringement by reason of:

- Their transmitting, routing, or providing connections for material through a system/network controlled/operated by the provider, or by reason of the intermediate and transient storage of that material in the course of such transmitting, routing, or providing connections, against infringement liability, if the provider:
  - has no actual knowledge that content is infringing;
  - is not aware of facts/circumstances from which infringing activity is likely (i.e., “red flag” knowledge);
  - is not willfully blind with respect to the infringement, or does not induce the infringement;

- For OSPs who either (i) provide storage at the direction of a user of material that resides on a system/network controlled/operated by or for the provider, or (ii) provide referring or linking users to an online location containing infringing material or activity, by using information location tools, including a directory, index, reference, pointer, or hypertext link: They must meet the above criteria, AND
  - not receive a financial benefit directly attributable to the infringing activity, in a case where the provider has the right and ability to control that activity.
OSPs receiving takedown notices must “act expeditiously” to:

- remove, or disable access to, the material that is claimed to be infringing or the subject of infringing activity; and
- notify the user, in accordance with standards established under rules to be issued by the Copyright Office, of:
  - the removal or disabling, as applicable;
  - the right of the user to file a counter-notification

AND....
OSP must take steps to ensure that, absent a sworn statement from the user that, subject to subsection (f) [false and bad faith removal notices], the user has a good faith belief that the use is licensed or authorized by law, including that the use is permitted under section 107 [fair use], the allegedly infringing materials stay down when:

- a complete or near complete copy of a copyrighted work already identified in a notification of claimed infringement or list of unauthorized works..., or
- any portion of a copyrighted work is already identified in a notification of claimed infringement or list of unauthorized works ..., if the service provider derives its commercial value predominantly from short-form media.
Proposed Digital Copyright Act:

Limitations on Liability Relating to Material Online

- OPS to follow “reasonableness best practices” to be established by the Register of Copyrights and updated every five years, that account for factors including the type and size of the service provider, and the scale of infringement that occurs on the platform.

- “Best practices” may include standards such as requiring a user who uploads, publicly performs, or displays content on a service to affirm that the user holds the copyright to that content, has permission to upload or publicly perform the content, or is otherwise authorized by law (including but not limited to fair use).

- Web button
- Terms of service
Not notifications of claimed infringement: written communication provided to the designated agent of the service provider that includes the following:

- Physical/electronic signature of person authorized to act for copyright owner.
- Identification of copyrighted work allegedly infringed, or, if multiple copyrighted works at a single online site are covered by a single notification, a non-exhaustive representative list of those allegedly infringed works at that website.
- Identification of the material that is claimed to be infringing or to be the subject of infringing activity and that is to be removed or access to which is to be disabled, and information reasonably sufficient to permit the service provider to locate the material.
- If the same copyrighted work is claimed to be infringed by multiple items of material or at multiple locations on a single website, the identification shall be sufficient for the purposes of clause (i) if the notification identifies not less than 1 such item of material and not less than 1 such location, rather than specific web addresses for each location.
Notifications must also provide:

➢ Information reasonably sufficient to permit the service provider to contact the complaining party [address, telephone number, mail address]

➢ A statement that the complaining party has a good faith belief that the use of the material in the manner complained of is not authorized by the copyright owner, its agent, or the law.

➢ A statement that the information in the notification is accurate, and under penalty of perjury, that the complaining party is authorized to act on behalf of the copyright owner.

A notice that fails to substantially comply with the above requirements cannot be used to determine whether a service provider has actual knowledge or is aware of facts/circumstances from which infringing activity is apparent.

However, if the notice fails to comply only with the physical/electronic signature requirement [“partial compliance”], the service provider only escapes liability if it: Promptly attempts to contact the person submitting the notification or takes other reasonable actions to assist in the receipt of a notification that substantially complies with the notice authorization provision.
“Takedown” notification penalties and restrictions:
➢ Party who submits a takedown notification without a [subjective] good faith belief that the use that is the subject of the notification is unauthorized shall be subject to damages.
➢ Party submitting the notification may not include information with respect to licensing or any demand of payment.

Counter-notifications by posting users: As per existing DMCA.

A notice sender to whom a counter-notification is provided may send the service provider a challenge claiming that the counter notification is facially invalid. Bad faith challenges are subject to claims for damages.

Notice senders who repeatedly issue false notifications would be “blacklisted” by Register of Copyrights.
ABA IP Law Section:

- OSPs should be required to act when an objectively reasonable person would be aware of or willfully blind to infringing material on their systems.
- Sophisticated OSPs should be required to monitor their systems and to remove infringing content without awaiting receipt of a takedown demand.
- OSPs should be required to remove reasonably identified material, including material identified through a representative list of works.
- Persons who make knowing, material misrepresentations through the notification system should be held monetarily liable.
AAP:

▪ “The DMCA has a tremendous impact on everyone who drives and benefits from the whirl of modern commerce—from copyright owners to online services providers to consumers and users of creative content.”

▪ “Regrettably, the once-innovative DMCA safe harbor system is now deeply damaged and no longer separates lawful copyright transactions from egregious online infringement. Rather, the safe harbors provide broad and unwarranted immunity to bad faith actors—some of whom monetize piracy—unfairly burdening copyright owners to locate and identify infringements and, worst of all, to engage in an interminable game of whack-a-mole that provides little, if any, relief from the pervasive violation of their rights.”
Re:Create Coalition (American Library Assoc., Open Technology Institute, EFF and others):

- “The DMCA, despite its critics, has aged well....Internet creativity is flourishing.... Consumers are enjoying the new forms of content available on these platforms and the growth of new creatives is not stopping anytime soon.... The [DCA] would have a chilling effect on the internet ecosystem. Had it passed just 10 years ago, this new creative industry would never have been created.

- “The DCA makes the notice and takedown/staydown framework apply to all providers, including email, conduits and private clouds.... Notice and takedown, or when it qualifies, staydown does not make sense for ‘dumb’ conduits, private activities, email and messaging services between private individuals and non-public facing storage of data.”

- “The DCA turns any provider of any type of internet services into the police, judge and jury.... The DCA shifts the burden onto providers to monitor for and identify potentially infringing content. They are required to remove any content if it is ‘likely’ infringing - a big change from the DMCA’s test of ‘facts and circumstances from which infringing activity is apparent.’”

- “The notice requirements allowing for a ‘non-exhaustive representative list’ eliminate requirement of location-specific information in notices, adding to the broad duty to monitor.... [I]t will require the implementation of often flawed and expensive filtering systems. Current technology is not up to the task of dealing with the subjective nature of what is and is not infringing copyright.

- “The DCA’s notice and staydown provisions will have a chilling impact on fair use, likely violating the First Amendment.”
AALL:

- “The proposed changes in the DCA make amendments to the [DMCA] that would significantly impact the ability of law libraries to provide equitable access to copyrighted materials.”

- “AALL believes that section 512 is working well for law librarians, legal information professionals, and law library users. While we understand the legitimate concerns some rightsholders have about potential online infringement of their works, we are concerned that the notice-and-staydown system proposed in this section would discourage the legal sharing of scholarship and legal research.”

- “Under a notice-and-staydown system, automated content filtering systems employed by online service providers may inadvertently flag legally shared content as infringing. Because automated content filtering systems often struggle with recognizing fair use claims, legally uploaded content may be unnecessarily removed, and the users could be prevented from uploading the content in the future.”
How long would a “stay-down” last, considering potential future fair uses?

OSP monitoring would require technological filtering that’s imperfect.

Adequacy of counter-notification process.

How to define a “likely” infringing content standard instead of the DMCA’s “apparent” standard.

Economic impact on startup/small platforms that can’t afford costly filtering systems (e.g., YouTube spent over $100 million to build ContentID, which is still evolving).

Will the DCA have a chilling effect on the First Amendment and fair use postings?

Would requiring the Copyright Office to establish “reasonableness best practices” overburden the Office?

RE: Digital Copyright Act of 2021 Discussion Draft

Dear Senator Tillis:

The American Association of Law Libraries (AALL), a national organization representing 4,000 law librarians and legal information professionals, appreciates the opportunity to provide comments on the Digital Copyright Act of 2021 (DCA). AALL agrees with your views that legislative changes are needed to improve copyright laws to encourage the creation of copyrightable works and to protect users who are making lawful uses of copyrighted materials.¹ We appreciate your efforts to address these issues.

The proposed changes in the DCA make amendments to the Digital Millennium Copyright Act (DMCA) that would significantly impact the ability of law libraries to provide equitable access to copyrighted materials. While AALL supports some of the changes in the DCA that promote access to legal information—including updates to section 1201—we are concerned that other changes may limit the abilities of law libraries to provide access to copyrighted works and preserve these works. We are providing more details on our views below.

SECTION 2. LIMITATIONS ON LIABILITY RELATING TO MATERIAL ONLINE

AALL believes that section 512 is working well for law librarians, legal information professionals, and law library users. While we understand the legitimate concerns some rightsholders have about potential online infringement of their works, we are concerned that the notice-and-staydown system proposed in this section would discourage the legal sharing of scholarship and legal research.

Under a notice-and-staydown system, automated content filtering systems employed by online service providers may inadvertently flag legally shared content as infringing. Because automated content filtering systems often struggle with recognizing fair use claims, legally uploaded content may be unnecessarily removed, and the users could be prevented from uploading the content in the future. Unless online service providers implement robust systems to address legal claims of fair use under a notice-and-takedown system, scholars, researchers, librarians, and others would be prevented from legally uploading important scholarship and legal research.

The potential impact on law libraries from takedown requests that do not consider fair use has become particularly apparent during the current COVID-19 pandemic. Law libraries are increasingly relying on fair use in remote learning environments for activities such as embedding videos into educational materials and sharing articles for course assignments.

AALL agrees with the U.S. Copyright Office (Copyright Office) in its report, Section 512 of Title 17, that a notice-and-staydown system requires additional study and public input before legislation is enacted.2 We urge you to remove the notice-and-staydown requirement from the draft legislation.

SECTION 3. LIMITATION ON REMEDIES IN CASES INVOLVING ORPHAN WORKS

Many academic law libraries and public law libraries have orphan works in their collections, including rare or out-of-print volumes, legal treatises, and other special collections. Digitizing these works will provide access to unique, historical materials that benefit the legal community, researchers, and the public. Digitizing these works would also provide access for people with disabilities for whom the original formats may not be accessible.

While AALL supported a similar legislative proposal to address orphan works when it was last considered by Congress more than a decade ago, we believe legislation that defines a “diligent search” and requires specific notice and attribution requirements is no longer needed for law libraries to digitize orphan works legally and successfully. The developments in several fair use cases, including *Authors Guild, Inc. v. HathiTrust*3 and *Authors Guild, Inc. v. Google Inc.*4 clarifies that law libraries may rely on fair use to digitize orphan works. The development of library best practices on orphan works has also provided law libraries with important guidance on how to apply both the fair use doctrine and other legal strategies to digitize special collections that may include orphan works.

AALL would welcome the opportunity to work with your office on alternative proposals to support the use of orphan works by law libraries, including options to address statutory damages that may protect rightsholders while encouraging digitization of orphan works under certain circumstances.

SECTION 4. APPOINTMENT OF REGISTER OF COPYRIGHTS; COPYRIGHT OFFICE RELOCATION

Law librarians and legal information professionals interact with the Copyright Office in many ways, including by registering their own works as creators; accessing copyright ownership records to support their organizations; and assisting attorneys, law professors, law students, and members of the public with researching copyright-related questions.

The current structure of the Copyright Office has advantages for the Copyright Office and the copyright system, the Library of Congress, and the public. The Copyright Office is funded through its own budget within the Library of Congress’ budget, which provides flexibility for the Office to set priorities and use funds to support its mission to “promote creativity and free expression by administering the nation’s copyright laws and by providing impartial, expert advice on copyright law and policy for the benefit of all.”

The Copyright Office also saves money by coordinating its information technology (IT) needs with the Library of Congress and by using specialized office space within the Library of Congress. Several Congressional committees have recently recognized the substantial progress the Copyright Office and the Library of Congress have made to update the Copyright Office’s IT systems. The Library of Congress also benefits from its close relationship with the Copyright Office. The Copyright Office shares information about certain works of authorship, known as copyright deposits, directly with the Library, which helps the Library expand its collections to benefit researchers and the public.

Several recent initiatives by the Copyright Office and the Library of Congress demonstrate the benefits of their current relationship to the copyright system and to the public. This includes the establishment of the new Copyright Public Modernization Committee, which is being convened by the Library of Congress to enhance communication between stakeholders in the copyright community and to allow public input on the technology-related aspects of the Copyright Office’s modernization initiatives. AALL also appreciates the Copyright Office’s efforts to solicit public input on its website and other IT initiatives. We are concerned that the proposed move of the Copyright Office out of the Library of Congress and into the U.S. Department of Commerce could interrupt the Copyright Office’s efforts to engage the public in its modernization efforts, including to solicit feedback on efforts to provide greater access to current and historical copyright records.

AALL believes that the Copyright Office’s location in the Library of Congress supports an efficient copyright system and benefits creators, rightsholders, libraries, and the public. We urge you to remove the proposal for moving the Copyright Office out of the Library of Congress from the draft legislation.

SECTION 5. MODERNIZING CIRCUMVENTION EXEMPTIONS

AALL appreciates the steps the Copyright Office has taken to implement improvements to the section 1201 rulemaking process, including streamlining the procedures for renewals of previously adopted exemptions. We believe the updates to the rulemaking process in this section would help to ensure an appropriate balance between the interests of copyright owners and users and facilitate equitable access to copyrighted information.

AALL supports the proposal that any temporary exemption adopted in the Copyright Office’s rulemaking proceeding under section 1201 of the DMCA receive a presumption in favor of renewal in the subsequent rulemaking proceeding. AALL also supports the proposed addition of the anti-trafficking provision to the triennial rulemaking process to enable the beneficiaries of temporary exemptions to make or obtain necessary circumvention tools. Finally, AALL supports the proposal to add other new permanent exemptions for non-infringing activities that enable blind, visually impaired, or print disabled people to utilize assistive technologies to gain access to law library resources such as e-books.

CONCLUSION

Thank you for giving AALL the opportunity to share its views on the Digital Copyright Act of 2021. We hope our comments will assist you in your efforts to reform the DMCA while balancing access to legal information. We also hope that you will reach out if your office has questions on the submitted comments.
Today Senator Thom Tillis (R-N.C.), Chairman of the Senate Judiciary Intellectual Property Subcommittee, released the Digital Copyright Act of 2021, his much anticipated discussion draft of legislation to modernize and reform the Digital Millennium Copyright Act (DMCA). Below is a comment from Maria A. Pallante, President and CEO of the Association of American Publishers (AAP), on the draft legislation:

“On behalf of the publishing industry, we thank Chairman Tillis for his purposeful efforts to evaluate and improve the DMCA framework by conducting a year-long series of hearings and releasing a discussion draft today aimed at possible legislative reforms. The DMCA has a tremendous impact on everyone who drives and benefits from the whirl of modern commerce—from copyright owners to online services providers to consumers and users of creative content.”

“In releasing the discussion draft, Chairman Tillis has taken an important step forward in addressing a serious problem. We look forward to working together with Chairman Tillis and Members of the Senate and House Judiciary Committees as this legislative dialogue progresses."

Re: ABA-IPL Section Comments on Draft Digital Copyright Act of 2021

Dear Senator Tillis:

On behalf of the Section of Intellectual Property Law of the American Bar Association (“Section”), we are pleased to submit this letter in response to your draft of the Digital Copyright Act of 2021 (“DCA”). The views expressed herein are presented on behalf of the Section, but have not been approved by the House of Delegates or the Board of Governors of the American Bar Association, and accordingly should not be construed as representing the positions of the Association. Although the Section applauds your modernization efforts, it has not adopted policy on each of the issues addressed by the DCA. Thus, the Section addresses below the provisions on which it has policy.

Limitations on Liability Relating to Material Online

Limitations of liability should not apply to OSPs when infringing materials are posted at the direction or request of OSPs.

The Section supports, in principle, limiting monetary liability for online service providers (“OSPs”) as a result of copyrighted material posted to the OSPs’ systems or networks by third parties, but it also supports conditioning such limitations on OSPs’ compliance with obligations that reasonably encourage and require them to remove or disable access to material that infringes upon copyrights. In doing so, the Section opposes extending such limitations on liability to OSPs when copyrighted materials are posted to the OSPs’ systems or networks by individuals or entities acting at the direction or request of the OSP.
OSPs should be required to act when an objectively reasonable person would be aware of or willfully blind to infringing material on their systems.

Under current law, one of the conditions of limiting their monetary liability as a result of copyrighted material posted to the OSPs’ systems or networks by third parties is to remove or disable access to infringing material under reasonable circumstances and within an expeditious timeframe, which includes when OSPs have actual knowledge or are willfully blind that such material or an activity using such material on the OSPs’ systems or networks is infringing. This makes sense to the Section. Current law also includes an objective reasonableness requirement. Yet, the Section would clarify the law to make clear that OSPs must act when an objectively reasonable person would be aware of or willfully blind to facts or circumstances indicating that third parties are posting infringing material to the OSPs’ systems or networks.

Sophisticated OSPs should be required to monitor their systems and to remove infringing content without awaiting receipt of a takedown demand.

Moreover, the Section supports, in principle, requiring OSPs, depending on their nature, size, and scope, to monitor their systems and networks to identify and remove or disable access to infringing material. Many OSPs are incredibly sophisticated and are able to determine with minute detail what material is on their systems or networks. The DMCA was not intended as a windfall for OSPs and, thus, they should be required to take steps to stop or prevent infringement when they are aware of such generalized infringement. When an OSP has the resources and ability to monitor its own systems, it should be required to do so and to remove the infringing material that it finds under appropriate circumstances. The Section, however, has not made a determination as to what standards should be used to measure an OSP’s ability to monitor its own systems in the context of the DMCA.

OSP policies regarding repeat infringers should be published to OSP users and implemented as written.

With regard to repeat infringers, the Section agrees with the current law that OSPs seeking to benefit from the DMCA’s safe harbors should adopt and reasonably implement a repeat infringer policy that the OSPs will terminate repeat infringers, as well as take other action intended to curb or prevent copyright infringement based on the nature of the OSPs and the allegations of infringement. It further believes that such policies should be in writing, communicated to the OSPs’ users, and implemented as written.¹ Although the current statute was written with the understanding that OSPs would adopt specific policies, recent cases have shown that, in some circumstances, OSPs merely pay lip service to that requirement. OSPs should be encouraged to include in the policy not just termination, but other actions the OSP will take to curb or prevent infringement, such as reducing the features or speed of, or access to, the OSPs’ systems.

¹ Although implementation may not be perfect, those circumstances that require deviation should be articulated in the policy. The repeat infringer polices must also apply not only to adjudicated repeat infringers, but alleged repeat infringers.
or networks. The policy should be provided to the OSPs’ users in order to encourage users to abide by the policy by putting them on notice and to permit copyright holders to confirm that the OSP has such a policy without suing the OSP and seeking the policy in discovery. Further, authorizing the Copyright Office to develop a model repeat infringer policy would allow the Office to implement these standards through rules creating standard technical measures for reducing infringement that OSPs will be required to adopt or accommodate. This will hold OSPs to a reasonable minimum benchmark.

OSP policies regarding repeat infringers should be published to OSP users and implemented as written.

The Section also supports, in principle, defining a repeat infringer as an individual who is repeatedly alleged to have infringed one or more copyright owners’ rights, but not if such alleged infringements are subsequently adjudged by a court of competent jurisdiction not to have been infringements. Limiting repeat infringement policies to adjudicated repeat infringers would require litigation against every person who stores infringing material on an OSP’s systems or network, which is not feasible.

OSP should be required to remove reasonably identified material, including material identified through a representative list of works.

Turning to DMCA notices, the Section supports conditioning the DMCA safe harbors on OSPs removing or disabling access to material when such material is reasonably identified as infringing by the copyright owner, which would include providing either (a) the title of a specific work and information reasonably sufficient for the OSP to locate such material; or (b) a representative list of works that infringe the copyright owner’s rights, such that the OSPs can reasonably identify infringing material on their systems or networks to be removed or disabled access (including both the representative sample and similarly situated materials). The Section also supports allowing the Copyright Office to determine through regulation whether there are other ways that a reasonable identification could be made. Given the existing comprehensive information required of copyright holders to make an identification of infringement, the Section opposes, in principle, OSPs adding additional requirements to copyright owners beyond such a Congressionally-legislated or Copyright Office-regulated list of information as a condition for removing or disabling access to material identified as infringing. The Section is comfortable with the list of information the DMCA currently requires copyright holders to provide to OSPs in takedown notices, without heightening standards through their own policies. As the DMCA currently provides that copyright holders may provide notice through a representative list of works, it does not make sense to permit copyright holders to provide a representative list but then to allow OSPs to restrict the material that they remove or to which they disable access to only those identified in the list.
Those who make knowing, material misrepresentations through the notice-and-takedown system should be held monetarily liable.

Likewise, with regard to counternotifications, the Section supports, in principle, (a) imposing liability on copyright owners, users, or service providers that make knowing and material misrepresentations as part of a process to remove or disable access to material posted online, on which limitations of monetary liability for OSPs is based; and (b) not requiring OSPs to take action in response to notices or counternotifications containing such knowing and material misrepresentations to qualify for limitations on monetary liability in such circumstances. The notice-and-takedown system created by the DMCA is subject to abuse when rights holders, users, or OSPs act in bad faith, such as (a) when a rights holder knows the challenged post is licensed; (b) when a user knows posting the content is infringing; or (c) when an OSP asserts that it has taken down content when it has not done so. These knowing, material misrepresentations reduce the effectiveness of the system, chilling speech from users who are making fair use in their posted content and burdening rights holders who must take further steps to assert their rights.

Copyright owners’ right to injunctive relief against OSPs should be evaluated under the standard test rather than limited by the DMCA.

Finally, with regard to injunctive relief, the Section supports, in principle, the availability of reasonable injunctive relief to copyright owners against OSPs that permit copyrighted material to be posted on their systems or networks by third parties without regard to limitations on monetary relief provided to OSPs by the copyright laws. Instead of the current limitations in the DMCA that restrict the nature or scope of such injunctive relief, the Section supports determining whether injunctive relief is reasonable based on factors such as (a) whether the copyright holder has or will suffer irreparable injury; (b) whether remedies are available at law to adequately compensate the copyright holder for the injury; (c) whether an equitable remedy is warranted given the balance of the hardships between the copyright owner and the OSP; and (d) whether the public interest would be served or disserved by an injunction. These factors are applied by courts every day, and will allow a case-by-case determination of when relief is appropriate.

Orphan Works Act

Although the Section has not had the opportunity to develop policy concerning the specific orphan works legislation in the DCA, it supports, in principle, legislation to limit the remedies available in copyright infringement suits against users of orphan works who (a) make a good faith, reasonably diligent effort to identify and locate the copyright owners of such works without success; and (b) file a notice of use with the U.S. Copyright Office prior to making such use. In determining what constitutes a reasonable search, the Section does not believe that users should have to search “dark archives” to the extent that term means “a collection of materials preserved for future use but with no current access,” but it would oppose, in principle, legislation that would exempt users of orphan works from searching databases that require a fee to access them.
Appointment of the Register of Copyrights: Copyright Office Relocation

This Section strongly supports establishing the Copyright Office as an independent agency with its head appointed by the President with the advice and consent of the Senate. Although it opposes making the Copyright Office part of the Patent & Trademark Office, it has not developed policy as to whether the agency would fit within the Department of Commerce. We, however, do note that some of our members worry that, by placing the Copyright Office within an Executive Branch department, the Office will lose the autonomy in rulemaking and control over its own budget and IT support that the Section believes are essential to its modernization. In particular, the Office historically has been permitted to provide unfiltered advice to Congress, which the Section believes is an important part of the Office’s role. Our members also note that, unlike patents and trademarks, copyrights are not considered “industrial property” and, thus, may protect works that are not commercial in nature.

Modernizing the Circumvention Exemptions (1201)

Although the Section has not developed views on all of the DCA’s provisions concerning the Copyright Act’s anti-circumvention provisions, it supports, in principle, establishing a presumption in favor of renewing previously granted exemptions to the prohibition against circumventing technological protection measures that control access to copyrighted works, as well as making permanent exemptions that have been adopted twice without opposition, subject to a process to raise changed circumstances to the Copyright Office, which may then move such exemptions back to the ordinary process. By doing so, burdens on those seeking less controversial exemptions could be reduced, while simultaneously leaving open the possibility that, due to changed circumstances, the Copyright Office can continue to consider the exceptions on an individualized basis.

Deposit Copy Retention

The Section supports, in principle, requiring the Library of Congress and/or Copyright Office to retain deposit copies where practicable, as well as to have those agencies contact copyright owners to return deposit copies prior to disposing of the copies. We see these provisions as important given that deposit copies’ original purpose was to serve as evidence of what was registered by the Office.

Fee Funding Authority During Lapse In Appropriations

The Section supports, in principle, permitting the Copyright Office to use registration fees to maintain operations during a lapse in appropriations. It is important that, even when the U.S. government shuts down, the Office is permitted to continue its critical functions.

Authority to Set Alternative Fee Structures

The Section supports, in principle, allowing the Copyright Office to lower its fees for individuals and small entities when those fee reductions are off-set by cost savings. from other modernization efforts (e.g., charging for API access to the Office’s records). This is because dynamic pricing can allow the Office to more equitably distribute the burden of such fees and believes that the measures in this section would be a step towards that principle. The Section believes, however, that the new fee structure should not overburden some applicants as it eases the burden on others. This can be accomplished as part of a modernization effort that will reduce costs and allow the Copyright Office to permit fee reductions where warranted.

Best Edition Definition

The Section supports, in principle, requiring the Librarian of Congress to post a definition of what constitutes a “best edition” of various types of works on the Library of Congress’ website.

Amendment of Application for Registration and Derivative Works

Although the Section has not had an opportunity to develop policy with regard to the specific approach adopted by the DCA, the Section supports, in principle, application of the effective registration doctrine to computer programs and other works that are routinely revised as new versions, such as websites, blogs, and video games. It also supports, in principle, the Copyright Office’s adoption of procedures that allow computer programs and other routinely revised works to update their registrations periodically, rather than filing for separate registrations when each new version is created. Works that are routinely revised require an alternative process to ensure that new versions, minor updates, and patches can be registered easily.

Copyright Office Public Advisory Board

The Section supports the creation of the board as doing so is in line with the longstanding public advisory boards at the PTO, with which Section members have interacted and of which some have been members in the past. In particular, such a board would allow the Register to hear directly from those who know the practice of copyright law intimately, and the members could bring their diverse experience to bear on issues facing the Office.

Copyright Office Studies

Finally, the Section supports the Copyright Office studies called for by the DCA on (a) whether the United States should provide press publishers a copyright-style right; (b) the best edition requirement; (c) how to define the term “publication” in the modern age, and how the Copyright Office can instruct applicants on how to designate publication status; and (d) whether the Copyright Office should provide a registration option for deferring examination of a work while making the submission date the effective registration date. Such studies will provide Congress with better information to determine whether further legislation is worth pursuing, as well as provide information to all parts of the copyright system.
If you have any comments or questions after reviewing these comments, we would be happy to respond and/or provide further comments.

Sincerely,

June M. Besek, Chair
ABA Section of Intellectual Property Law
17 U.S. Code § 512 - Limitations on liability relating to material online

(a) Transitory Digital Network Communications.—A service provider shall not be liable for monetary relief, or, except as provided in subsection (j), for injunctive or other equitable relief, for infringement of copyright by reason of the provider’s transmitting, routing, or providing connections for, material through a system or network controlled or operated by or for the service provider, or by reason of the intermediate and transient storage of that material in the course of such transmitting, routing, or providing connections, if—

(1) the transmission of the material was initiated by or at the direction of a person other than the service provider;

(2) the transmission, routing, provision of connections, or storage is carried out through an automatic technical process without selection of the material by the service provider;

(3) the service provider does not select the recipients of the material except as an automatic response to the request of another person;

(4) no copy of the material made by the service provider in the course of such intermediate or transient storage is maintained on the system or network in a manner ordinarily accessible to anyone other than anticipated recipients, and no such copy is maintained on the system or network in a manner ordinarily accessible to such anticipated recipients for a longer period than is reasonably necessary for the transmission, routing, or provision of connections; and

(5) the material is transmitted through the system or network without modification of its content.

(b) System Caching.—

(1) Limitation on liability.—A service provider shall not be liable for monetary relief, or, except as provided in subsection (j), for injunctive or other equitable relief, for infringement of copyright by reason of the intermediate and temporary storage of material on a system or network controlled or operated by or for the service provider in a case in which—

(A) the material is made available online by a person other than the service provider;

(B) the material is transmitted from the person described in subparagraph (A) through the system or network to a person other than the person described in subparagraph (A) at the direction of that other person; and

(C) the storage is carried out through an automatic technical process for the purpose of making the material available to users of the system or network who, after the material is transmitted as described in subparagraph (B), request access to the material from the person described in subparagraph (A),

if the conditions set forth in paragraph (2) are met.

(2) Conditions.—The conditions referred to in paragraph (1) are that—

(A) the material described in paragraph (1) is transmitted to the subsequent users described in paragraph (1)(C) without modification to its content from the manner in which the paragraph (1)(A);

(B) the service provider described in paragraph (1) complies with rules concerning the refreshing, reloading, or other updating of the material when specified by the person making the material available online in accordance with a generally accepted industry standard data communications protocol for the system or network through which that person makes the material available, except that this subparagraph applies only if those rules are not used by the person described in paragraph (1)(A) to prevent or unreasonably impair the intermediate storage to which this subsection applies;

(C) the service provider does not interfere with the ability of technology associated with the material to return to the person described in paragraph (1)(A) the information that would have been available to that person if the material had been obtained by the subsequent users described in paragraph (1)(C) directly from that person, except that this subparagraph applies only if that technology—

(i) does not significantly interfere with the performance of the provider’s system or network or with the intermediate storage of the material;

(ii) is consistent with generally accepted industry standard communications protocols; and

(iii) does not extract information from the provider’s system or network other than the information that would have been available to the person described in paragraph (1)(A) if the subsequent users had gained access to the material directly from that person;

(D) if the person described in paragraph (1)(A) has in effect a condition that a person must meet prior to having access to the material, such as a condition based on payment of a fee or provision of a password or other information, the service provider permits access to the stored material in significant part only to users of its system or network that have met those conditions and only in accordance with those conditions; and

(E) if the person described in paragraph (1)(A) makes that material available online without the authorization of the copyright owner of the material, the service provider responds expeditiously to remove, or disable access to, the material that is claimed to be infringing upon notification of claimed infringement as described in subsection (c)(3), except that this subparagraph applies only if—

(i) the material has previously been removed from the originating site or access to it has been disabled, or a court has ordered that the material be removed from the originating site or that access to the material on the originating site be disabled; and

(ii) the party giving the notification includes in the notification a statement confirming that the material has been removed from the originating site or access to it has been disabled or that a court has ordered that the material be removed from the originating site or that access to the material on the originating site be disabled.

(c) Information Residing on Systems or Networks At Direction of Users.—

(1) In general.—A service provider shall not be liable for monetary relief, or, except as provided in subsection (j), for injunctive or other equitable relief, for infringement of copyright by reason of the storage at the direction of a user of material that resides on a system or network controlled or operated by or for the service provider, if the service provider—

(i) does not have actual knowledge that the material or an activity using the material on the system or network is infringing;

(ii) in the absence of such actual knowledge, is not aware of facts or circumstances from which infringing activity is apparent; or

(iii) upon obtaining such knowledge or awareness, acts expeditiously to remove, or disable access to, the material;
(B) does not receive a financial benefit directly attributable to the infringing activity, in a case in which the service provider has the right and ability to control such activity; and

(C) upon notification of claimed infringement as described in paragraph (3), responds expeditiously to remove, or disable access to, the material that is claimed to be infringing or to be the subject of infringing activity.

(2) Designated agent.—The limitations on liability established in this subsection apply to a service provider only if the service provider has designated an agent to receive notifications of claimed infringement described in paragraph (3), by making available through its service, including on its website in a location accessible to the public, and by providing to the Copyright Office, substantially the following information:

(A) the name, address, phone number, and electronic mail address of the agent.

(B) other contact information which the Register of Copyrights may deem appropriate.

The Register of Copyrights shall maintain a current directory of agents available to the public for inspection, including through the Internet, and may require payment of a fee by service providers to cover the costs of maintaining the directory.

(3) Elements of notification.—

(A) To be effective under this subsection, a notification of claimed infringement must be a written communication provided to the designated agent of a service provider that includes substantially the following:

(i) A physical or electronic signature of a person authorized to act on behalf of the owner of an exclusive right that is allegedly infringed.

(ii) Identification of the copyrighted work claimed to have been infringed, or, if multiple copyrighted works at a single online site are covered by a single notification, a representative list of such works at that site.
(iii) Identification of the material that is claimed to be infringing or to be the subject of infringing activity and that is to be removed or access to which is to be disabled, and information reasonably sufficient to permit the service provider to locate the material.

(iv) Information reasonably sufficient to permit the service provider to contact the complaining party, such as an address, telephone number, and, if available, an electronic mail address at which the complaining party may be contacted.

(v) A statement that the complaining party has a good faith belief that use of the material in the manner complained of is not authorized by the copyright owner, its agent, or the law.

(vi) A statement that the information in the notification is accurate, and under penalty of perjury, that the complaining party is authorized to act on behalf of the owner of an exclusive right that is allegedly infringed.

(i) Subject to clause (ii), a notification from a copyright owner or from a person authorized to act on behalf of the copyright owner that fails to comply substantially with the provisions of subparagraph (A) shall not be considered under paragraph (1)(A) in determining whether a service provider has actual knowledge or is aware of facts or circumstances from which infringing activity is apparent.

(ii) In a case in which the notification that is provided to the service provider’s designated agent fails to comply substantially with all the provisions of subparagraph (A) but substantially complies with clauses (ii), (iii), and (iv) of subparagraph (A), clause (i) of this subparagraph applies only if the service provider promptly attempts to contact the person making the notification or takes other reasonable steps to assist in the receipt of notification that substantially complies with all the provisions of subparagraph (A).
(d) Information Location Tools.—A service provider shall not be liable for monetary relief, or, except as provided in subsection (j), for injunctive or other equitable relief, for infringement of copyright by reason of the provider referring or linking users to an online location containing infringing material or infringing activity, by using information location tools, including a directory, index, reference, pointer, or hypertext link, if the service provider—

(A) does not have actual knowledge that the material or activity is infringing;

(B) in the absence of such actual knowledge, is not aware of facts or circumstances from which infringing activity is apparent; or

(C) upon obtaining such knowledge or awareness, acts expeditiously to remove, or disable access to, the material;

(2) does not receive a financial benefit directly attributable to the infringing activity, in a case in which the service provider has the right and ability to control such activity; and

(3) upon notification of claimed infringement as described in subsection (c)(3), responds expeditiously to remove, or disable access to, the material that is claimed to be infringing or to be the subject of infringing activity, except that, for purposes of this paragraph, the information described in subsection (c)(3)(A)(iii) shall be identification of the reference or link, to material or activity claimed to be infringing, that is to be removed or access to which is to be disabled, and information reasonably sufficient to permit the service provider to locate that reference or link.

(e) Limitation on Liability of Nonprofit Educational Institutions.—

(1) When a public or other nonprofit institution of higher education is a service provider, and when a faculty member or graduate student who is an employee of such institution is performing a teaching or research function, for the purposes of subsections (a) and (b) such faculty member or graduate student...
shall be considered to be a person other than the institution, and for the purposes of subsections (c) and (d) such faculty member’s or graduate student’s knowledge or awareness of his or her infringing activities shall not be attributed to the institution, if—

(A) such faculty member’s or graduate student’s infringing activities do not involve the provision of online access to instructional materials that are or were required or recommended, within the preceding 3-year period, for a course taught at the institution by such faculty member or graduate student;

(B) the institution has not, within the preceding 3-year period, received more than two notifications described in subsection (c)(3) of claimed infringement by such faculty member or graduate student, and such notifications of claimed infringement were not actionable under subsection (f); and

(C) the institution provides to all users of its system or network informational materials that accurately describe, and promote compliance with, the laws of the United States relating to copyright.

(2) For the purposes of this subsection, the limitations on injunctive relief contained in subsections (j)(2) and (j)(3), but not those in (j)(1), shall apply.

(f) Misrepresentations.—Any person who knowingly materially misrepresents under this section—

(1) that material or activity is infringing, or

(2) that material or activity was removed or disabled by mistake or misidentification, shall be liable for any damages, including costs and attorneys’ fees, incurred by the alleged infringer, by any copyright owner or copyright owner’s authorized licensee, or by a service provider, who is injured by such misrepresentation, as the result of the service provider relying upon such misrepresentation in removing or disabling access to the material or activity claimed to be infringing, or in replacing the removed material or ceasing to disable access to it.

(g) REPLACEMENT OF REMOVED OR DISABLED MATERIAL AND LIMITATION ON OTHER LIABILITY.—

(1) NO LIABILITY FOR TAKING DOWN GENERALLY.— Subject to paragraph (2), a service provider shall not be liable to any person for any claim based on the service provider’s good faith disabling of access to, or removal of, material or activity claimed to be infringing or based on facts or circumstances from which infringing activity is apparent, regardless of whether the material or activity is ultimately determined to be infringing.

(2) EXCEPTION.—Paragraph (1) shall not apply with respect to material residing at the direction of a subscriber of the service provider on a system or network controlled or operated by or for the service provider that is removed, or to which access is disabled by the service provider, pursuant to a notice provided under subsection (c)(1)(C), unless the service provider—

(A) takes reasonable steps promptly to notify the subscriber that it has removed or disabled access to the material;

(B) upon receipt of a counter notification described in paragraph (3), promptly provides the person who provided the notification under subsection (c)(1)(C) with a copy of the counter notification, and informs that person that it will replace the removed material or cease disabling access to it in 10 business days; and

(C) replaces the removed material and ceases disabling access to it not less than 10, nor more than 14, business days following receipt of the counter notice, unless its designated agent first receives notice from the person who submitted the notification under subsection (c)(1)(C) that such person has filed an action seeking a court order to restrain the subscriber from engaging in infringing activity relating to the material on the service provider’s system or network.

(3) CONTENTS OF COUNTER NOTIFICATION.—To be effective under this subsection, a counter notification must be a written communication provided to the service provider’s designated agent that includes substantially the following:

(A) A physical or electronic signature of the subscriber.

(B) Identification of the material that has been removed or to which access has been disabled and the location at which the material appeared before it was removed or access to it was disabled.

(C) A statement under penalty of perjury that the subscriber has a good faith belief that the material was removed or disabled as a result of mistake or misidentification of the material to be removed or disabled.

(D) The subscriber’s name, address, and telephone number, and a statement that the subscriber consents to the jurisdiction of Federal District Court for the judicial district in which the address is located, or if the subscriber’s address is outside of the United States, for any judicial district in which the service provider may be found, and that the subscriber will accept service of process from the person who provided notification under subsection (c)(1)(C) or an agent of such person.

(4) LIMITATION ON OTHER LIABILITY.—
A service provider’s compliance with paragraph (2) shall not subject the service provider to liability for copyright infringement with respect to the material identified in the notice provided under subsection (c)(1)(C).

(h) SUBPOENA TO IDENTIFY INFRINGER.—

(1) REQUEST.—
A copyright owner or a person authorized to act on the owner’s behalf may request the clerk of any United States district court to issue a subpoena to a service provider for identification of an alleged infringer in accordance with this subsection.

(2) CONTENTS OF REQUEST.—The request may be made by filing with the clerk—

(A) a copy of a notification described in subsection (c)(3)(A); and

(B) a proposed subpoena; and
(C) a sworn declaration to the effect that the purpose for which the subpoena is sought is to obtain the identity of an alleged infringer and that such information will only be used for the purpose of protecting rights under this title.

(3) Contents of subpoena.—
The subpoena shall authorize and order the service provider receiving the notification and the subpoena to expeditiously disclose to the copyright owner or person authorized by the copyright owner information sufficient to identify the alleged infringer of the material described in the notification to the extent such information is available to the service provider.

(4) Basis for granting subpoena.—
If the notification filed satisfies the provisions of subsection (c)(3)(A), the proposed subpoena is in proper form, and the accompanying declaration is properly executed, the clerk shall expeditiously issue and sign the proposed subpoena and return it to the requester for delivery to the service provider.

(5) Actions of service provider receiving subpoena.—
Upon receipt of the issued subpoena, either accompanying or subsequent to the receipt of a notification described in subsection (c)(3)(A), the service provider shall expeditiously disclose to the copyright owner or person authorized by the copyright owner the information required by the subpoena, notwithstanding any other provision of law and regardless of whether the service provider responds to the notification.

(6) Rules applicable to subpoena.—
Unless otherwise provided by this section or by applicable rules of the court, the procedure for issuance and delivery of the subpoena, and the remedies for noncompliance with the subpoena, shall be governed to the greatest extent practicable by those provisions of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure governing the issuance, service, and enforcement of a subpoena duces tecum.

(i) Conditions for Eligibility.—

(1) Accommodation of technology.—The limitations on liability established by this section shall apply to a service provider only if the service provider—

(A) has adopted and reasonably implemented, and informs subscribers and account holders of the service provider’s system or network of, a policy that provides for the termination in appropriate circumstances of subscribers and account holders of the service provider’s system or network who are repeat infringers; and

(B) accommodates and does not interfere with standard technical measures.

(2) Definition.—As used in this subsection, the term “standard technical measures” means technical measures that are used by copyright owners to identify or protect copyrighted works and—

(A) have been developed pursuant to a broad consensus of copyright owners and service providers in an open, fair, voluntary, multi-industry standards process;

(B) are available to any person on reasonable and nondiscriminatory terms; and

(C) do not impose substantial costs on service providers or substantial burdens on their systems or networks.

(j) Injunctions.—The following rules shall apply in the case of any application for an injunction under section 502 against a service provider that is not subject to monetary remedies under this section:

(1) Scope of relief.—

(A) With respect to conduct other than that which qualifies for the limitation on remedies set forth in subsection (a), the court may grant injunctive relief with respect to a service provider only in one or more of the following forms:

(i) An order restraining the service provider from providing access to infringing material or activity residing at a particular online site on the provider’s system or network.

(ii) An order restraining the service provider from providing access to a subscriber or account holder of the service provider’s system or network who is engaging in infringing activity and is identified in the order, by terminating the accounts of the subscriber or account holder that are specified in the order.

(iii) Such other injunctive relief as the court may consider necessary to prevent or restrain infringement of copyrighted material specified in the order of the court at a particular online location, if such relief is the least burdensome to the service provider among the forms of relief comparably effective for that purpose.

(B) If the service provider qualifies for the limitation on remedies described in subsection (a), the court may only grant injunctive relief in one or both of the following forms:

(i) An order restraining the service provider from providing access to a subscriber or account holder of the service provider’s system or network who is using the provider’s service to engage in infringing activity and is identified in the order, by terminating the accounts of the subscriber or account holder that are specified in the order.

(ii) An order restraining the service provider from providing access, by taking reasonable steps specified in the order to block access, to a specific, identified, online location outside the United States.

(2) CONSIDERATIONS.—The court, in considering the relevant criteria for injunctive relief under applicable law, shall consider—

(A) whether such an injunction, either alone or in combination with other such injunctions issued against the same service provider under this subsection, would significantly burden either the provider or the operation of the provider’s system or network;

(B) the magnitude of the harm likely to be suffered by the copyright owner in the digital network environment if steps are not taken to prevent or restrain the infringement;

(C) whether implementation of such an injunction would be technically feasible and effective, and would not interfere with access to noninfringing material at other online locations; and

(D) whether other less burdensome and comparably effective means of preventing or restraining access to the infringing material are available.

(3) Notice and ex parte orders.—
Injunctive relief under this subsection shall be available only after notice to the service provider and an opportunity for the service provider to appear are provided, except for orders ensuring the preservation of evidence or other orders having no material adverse effect on the operation of the service provider’s communications network.

(k) Definitions.—

(1) Service provider.—

(A) As used in subsection (a), the term “service provider” means an entity offering the transmission, routing, or providing of connections for digital online communications, between or among points specified by a user, of material of the user’s choosing, without modification to the content of the material as sent or received.

(B) As used in this section, other than subsection (a), the term “service provider” means a provider of online services or network access, or the operator of facilities therefor, and includes an entity described in subparagraph (A).

(2) Monetary relief.—
As used in this section, the term “monetary relief” means damages, costs, attorneys’ fees, and any other form of monetary payment.

(1) Other defenses not affected.—
The failure of a service provider’s conduct to qualify for limitation of liability under this section shall not bear adversely upon the consideration of a defense by the service provider that the service provider’s conduct is not infringing under this title or any other defense.
(m) Protection of Privacy.—Nothing in this section shall be construed to condition the applicability of subsections (a) through (d) on—

1. a service provider monitoring its service or affirmatively seeking facts indicating infringing activity, except to the extent consistent with a standard technical measure complying with the provisions of subsection (i); or

2. a service provider gaining access to, removing, or disabling access to material in cases in which such conduct is prohibited by law.

(n) Construction.—Subsections (a), (b), (c), and (d) describe separate and distinct functions for purposes of applying this section. Whether a service provider qualifies for the limitation on liability in any one of those subsections shall be based solely on the criteria in that subsection, and shall not affect a determination of whether that service provider qualifies for the limitations on liability under any other such subsection.

Senator Tom Tillis
113 Dirksen Senate Office Building
Washington, DC 20510

Dear Senator Tillis:

Thank you for the opportunity to provide feedback on your proposed Digital Copyright Act. Unfortunately, the draft as proposed creates a system for digital copyright that is clearly unconstitutional and just unworkable for internet creators, users and service providers. Rather than make some tweaks to the DMCA to improve a generally well-functioning system that has allowed creativity, expression, and innovation to thrive on the internet, it completely destroys the core framework of the DMCA and replaces it with a system that will chill online creativity, take choices away from consumers and harm the internet ecosystem. Thus, we are not providing a red line in response and instead share some feedback on the concepts within the draft and our perspective on a better way forward.

The DMCA, despite its critics, has aged well thanks to the expert drafting of Senators Hatch and Leahy. Internet creativity is flourishing. Approximately 5 billion views of videos occur on YouTube every day. In 2019 Etsy sales were approximately $5 billion, and in the first half of 2020 sales increased 71 percent. This February, almost 3 billion hours were spent watching Twitch streamers, more than double the amount from February 2019. In 2019, Patreon made $500 million in payouts to creators. Instagram influencers made $2.3 billion in 2020. The Archive of Our Own (AO3) has over 5 million creative works in its repository and won a Hugo Award in 2020 for its contributions to literature. The online influencer market is estimated to have been almost $10 billion in 2020. Internet streaming was a $161.37 billion market in 2020. Our own study of just three years ago is a drop in the bucket of what has happened since.

The numbers are staggering. Consumers are enjoying the new forms of content available on these platforms and the growth of new creatives is not stopping anytime soon. By authoring the DMCA, Senators Leahy and Hatch unlocked this creative revolution, one that Congress should be proud of creating, and one that is exactly why we have copyright law - to promote the progress of the useful arts.

The Digital Copyright Act would have a chilling effect on the internet ecosystem. Had it passed just 10 years ago, this new creative industry would never have been created. It deter the proliferation of not just the new creative economy -- additional innovative technologies, like cloud services, would not exist. No investor would have taken a chance on the platforms and services consumers use every day on their phone, their desktop, at work and for fun. A nonprofit-run service like AO3 or Wikipedia would never be able to get off the ground due to the staggeringly high costs of complying with DCA. We would have lost billions of dollars in economic value, and also would have missed out on an unquantifiably large amount of creative works that would never have seen the light of day.

Because the framework of the DCA as currently written is so problematic, we cannot provide specific constructive feedback on the contents of the DCA. While our reasons for this are numerous, we wanted to highlight the fundamental problems with the DCA and its repeal of the DMCA, in order to encourage a focus on multi-stakeholder collaboration to address specific concerns in the ecosystem. There are many problems that are more specific and nuanced, but at this time commentary on them would be premature.

1. The DCA makes the notice and takedown/staydown framework apply to all providers, including email, conduits and private clouds

   The DCA eliminates the distinction between different types of providers. In doing so, it forces all sorts of providers, including internet access providers, email services, cloud services and more to be subject to the notice and takedown/staydown system, in a complete departure from one of the key decisions made by the DMCA's drafters. Notice and takedown, or when it qualifies, staydown does not make sense for “dumb” conduits, private activities, email and messaging services between private individuals and non-public facing storage of data.

   An example illustrates just how intrusive and wrong the DCA's enactment would be. Bob takes a video with his iPhone of his kids dancing to a Taylor Swift song. Bob emails that video to his parents and also texts it to his wife. Given the personal use and the Lenz case, it is safe to say this is not infringing copyright. However, based on the current draft of the DCA this would trigger a series of actions to occur.

   If Bob’s email provider, internet access provider, his wife’s email provider, wife’s internet access provider, his parents’ internet access provider and/or his parents’ email provider received a notice on Taylor Swift’s song at any time prior, this would trigger the DCA's staydown requirements without the sending of a new notice.

   In combination with the DCA's duty to monitor, all of these services would have to inspect what is being sent. If they implemented a filtering technology in order to comply, it is safe to say that every level of this “transaction” would face challenges. What’s more, Bob’s email provider and internet access provider may have to prevent him from sending it unless they have a way to inspect the specific contents, know that the recipient is authorized under copyright law, and be willing to take on the risk of being sued.

   iCloud -- or any other cloud service -- would face a similar challenge and potentially delete the video. In the unlikely event that the video made it through Bob’s services, his parent’s internet access and email providers would likely prevent the email from reaching their inbox with the file attached, and his wife’s internet access provider would do the same for the text message. Bob could still have the video on his iPhone’s harddrive, but he could only share it with people by playing it on his phone with them present in the room. This issue alone is enough to require a return to the drawing board.

2. The DCA turns any provider of any type of internet services into the police, judge and jury

One of the issues with the DMCA as written is it allows allegations of copyright infringement, not actual infringement. This allows content to be taken down permanently unless there is either a counter-notice or the intermediary feels so confident it is not infringing that they keep the content up and take on the liability burden. Less than 1% of notices sent receive a counter-notice, permanently removing content from the internet. However, a far lower share of that content is actually infringing copyright.

The DCA shifts the burden onto providers to monitor for and identify potentially infringing content. They are required to remove any content if it is “likely” infringing - a big change from the DMCA’s test of “facts and circumstances from which infringing activity is apparent.” The “Likely” standard is extremely subjective and in reality it will force any intermediary to be overly-cautious and institute a lesser standard to avoid liability for tens of billions in damages. This “likely” standard will actually create a much lower “maybe” standard to avoid massive legal risk and uncertainty. Additionally, without rights holders providing notices for each alleged infringement, it is extremely challenging for a provider to make this determination for the particular use. As a result, under the DCA massive amounts of non-infringing content will never get to be shared using the internet in any way.

Furthermore, it is not necessary to change the red flag knowledge standard. Those complaining about judicial interpretation of the red flag knowledge standard under the DMCA point to two cases as the most problematic: Perfect 10 and Viacom. However, they always omit a key fact: some of the content in those cases was not infringing, thus the infringement was not apparent nor should it have been. Given the unique facts of those cases, the courts reached the right decision, yet the testimony of witnesses and submissions to the IP Subcommittee throughout 2020 conveniently leave this key fact out. It’s time to ignore false flags from the content industry and leave the red flag knowledge standard as it is: working as it was intended.

The bill also guts the current “no duty to monitor” requirement by permitting “reasonable monitoring.” Combined with the red flag knowledge change and the move to staydown for certain content, this actually creates a “duty to monitor” requirement in practice. The notice requirements allowing for a “non-exhaustive representative list” eliminate requirement of location-specific information in notices, adding to the broad duty to monitor.

Reasonable monitoring can still leave internet providers open to red flag knowledge problems, as well as liability on staydown eligible content, without even getting at the problem of locating content that has been noticed. In the end, this will create a copyright surveillance state at every layer of the internet, one that fundamentally violates the privacy of many Americans. Imagine if the phone company was required to inspect every phone call. That is what the DCA does for internet communications.

In order to implement the new-found surveillance state, it will require the implementation of often flawed and expensive filtering systems. Current technology is not up to the task of dealing with the subjective nature of what is and is not infringing copyright - this has been borne out by even the most sophisticated filtering tools on the market today. Additionally, even if non-infringing content gets past one filtering system, there are multiple company systems it will have to go through. So, while content might be on a platform, a potential consumer could be blocked from accessing that content by their ISP, a cloud service for that platform or see it removed from search results. That is of course on top of the platform’s filter.

This is a serious problem for small businesses. One potentially infringing photo on a website for a small local business would likely cause their website to be taken offline (or at least the page with the infringing content) as well as their business being removed from search results. The idea that a webpage could be taken offline without any due process until the photo is removed is a serious problem; the punishment simply does not meet the crime. This would apply to any type of operation, including charities, schools, libraries, local government, small businesses, political campaigns, official congressional pages, and so much more.

Additionally, the notice and staydown provisions provide an impossible catch-22 for any business, organization or individual subject to its requirements. By requiring the blocking of any re-upload of complete and near complete copies (and shorter portions if the provider derives its commercial value predominantly from short-form media) platforms will be doomed to fail in their good faith attempts to comply. There will be infringing activity that still occurs and makes it through even with the best, most conservative filters imaginable. Because of that, if a platform, cloud provider, e-commerce company or other third-party service providers want to allow the use of any copyrighted content on their platforms, they will inherently have accidental slip ups at a cost of up to $150,000 each.

3. The DCA does not contemplate the unique issues around physical goods

By creating a one size fits all approach, the legislation does not capture all of the ways the DMCA applies online. Additionally, it reads to only combat illicit uses of intellectual property online and does not consider e-commerce and other uses of platforms. If considering changes to the DMCA, it’s prudent to consider every usage of the internet. The internet is more than simply an entertainment machine, it’s an economic engine -- an important point that the original drafters of the legislation understood.

Using Bob from earlier, imagine he goes onto Etsy to buy a t-shirt that is a parody of his favorite TV show. Bob assumes the shirt is not copyright infringing. However, the large TV studio disagrees and believes it is not a fair use. Under current law, if Bob wants to purchase the t-shirt he can and the dispute will be between the t-shirt seller and the TV studio.
Under the DCA, this dynamic completely changes. The studio has many shots at preventing the t-shirt from being sold. They can send a notice under the DCA to Etsy, to search engines that link to the Etsy content, to Bob’s internet access provider and others. While Etsy is much more likely to understand copyright and support their artist, the others who have no relationship with the seller have no incentive to allow the transaction

The DCA places a burden on all of the internet services involved to monitor for all uses and attempts to use the image on the t-shirt that is copyrighted. However, unlike a digital file, there are no metadata or underlying technological identifiers on a physical good. How are filters supposed to accurately find the use of the copyright work, let alone understand the nuance between the original image and the parody of it?

Additionally, this sets up a liability trap for all these internet services. They now have legal risk depending on if the parody is a fair use or not. Rather than go after the Etsy small business, it will make sense to go after the deeper pockets of the internet services for up to $150,000 in damages. The internet services will also have to consider the costs of a potentially expensive litigation that is likely a fair use parody. This is a bonanza for IP lawyers. It will certainly be easier to go after the big internet business than the actual artist who created the fair use parody.

This is not just a problem from notice and staydown -- the de facto duty to monitor requirements of the DCA create the same dilemma. And while Bob and Etsy are just one example, there are many creators selling their physical creations on services like Society6, Redbubble, Shapeways, and countless others. How are these platforms going to comply with the DCA when it comes to the requirements on them? This will be to the financial detriment of all the creators that are using those platforms while preventing them from benefiting from their creativity.

4. The DCA fails to address the harms of false notices and makes it even harder to send a counter-notice

The draft legislation forces anyone sending a counter-notice into the CASE Act’s “Copyright Claims Board” (CCB) jurisdiction. Re:Create believes that the CCB opt-out process as codified by the CASE Act does not comply with the Seventh Amendment right to a trial by jury. That will ultimately be up to the courts to decide. However, the current draft legislation forces counter-notice senders to consent to jurisdiction of the CCB. In doing so, the only way they can voluntarily opt-out of the CCB is not to exercise their right to counter-notice. That is an absurd proposition that takes away any argument around voluntary consent to CCB jurisdiction, further proving that it is unconstitutional. It will also massively discourage the sending of counter-notices, something that is already a big problem.

Second, the DCA requires a counter-notice sender to explain why the notice was abusive/mistaken and to explain why their use is licensed and fair. This creates a lot of extra work to counter-notice, and also requires the counter-notice sender to prematurely make their legal arguments known to the notice sender without placing the equivalent conditions on filing a notice. This is not just unfair to the recipients of notices, but will also only further discourage counter-notices.

Third, it allows the notice sender to “challenge” a counter-notice, but gives no details on how or by whom that challenge is to be adjudicated. A lot more details are needed on this before its impact on counter-notices can be judged, but it is likely to have the impact of curtailing the sending of counter-notices. Studies show that about a third of all notices are bad, and yet less than one percent of notices are countered, creating a wide gap. We should be doing everything in our power to encourage the sending of counter-notices in these cases.

5. The DCA’s notice and staydown provisions will have a chilling impact on fair use, likely violating the First Amendment

The notice and staydown provisions in the DCA create a system where sending a single notice suffices as a notice on all uses of that work, past, present and future. While that is a convenient option for notice senders, it leaves internet services with two options: do their own copyright analysis of the use and hope they get it right, or just take down all future uses, even if they are lawful. This shifts how lawful uses are exercised - it would require sending a counter-notice to have lawful uses on the internet, especially fair uses.

The current counter-notice system is already flawed, as many have testified about in the Copyright Office 512 roundtables and before the IP Subcommittee in 2020. However, when added to the forced consent to CCB jurisdiction to counter-notice, this could have the effect of taking almost all fair use cases out of the courts and placing them instead in a venue with no substantive right to appeal, just in order to exercise fair use rights. This sets up a trap for Americans - choose to sacrifice their 7th Amendment rights to a trial by jury or their First Amendment rights to free speech.

6. The “reasonable best practices” developed by the Copyright Office and NTIA would create a government-mandated prior restraint on free speech

This provision has serious First Amendment problems, as it would allow the federal government to create regulations forcing speech holders to meet certain conditions to be allowed to “speak”. Under copyright law, you exercise your speech rights and are then subject to the consequences of doing so. However, by mandating best practices, this would fundamentally change that dynamic to the government policing what is said before it is said. This is the government creating a prior restraint on speech before it is permitted. That violates the First Amendment.

7. The DCA empowers the flawed CCB on misrepresentation claims

As Re:Create has argued for the last couple years, the CCB created in the CASE Act will likely become an opt-out factory, especially for copyright sophisticated companies and individuals that know the process and procedure. This is because these people will know that court is too burdensome and costly to actually file an action (which is ironically why the CCB was created in the first place).

Thus, the CCB is a terrible venue to deal with misrepresentation and fraudulent notice claims. Most notice senders will just opt-out of a CCB action, leaving afflicted parties with a false solution.

8. The DCA could result in Americans losing internet access because of mere allegations of infringement

Throughout this process, many commenters have raised the serious concerns of termination of internet access as a potential remedy, including the Copyright Office itself in its follow up letter to your office on their 512 Study. The arguments are many and need not be repeated yet again. Allegations of copyright infringement, even if borne out to be true, cannot lead to the complete economic, social, societal and educational disenfranchisement of all members of a household that occurs with termination of access, especially given the lack of competition in broadband marketplaces for so many Americans and the weeks it would take to get reconnected if another provider was available in a market.

Conclusion

There are many, many other challenges with the DCA that are not discussed here because they are specific issues rather than structural flaws. They include but are not limited to:

1) codifying the flawed subjective good faith standard of the Lenz decision;
2) moving the Copyright Office out of the Library of Congress and empowering it with significant new regulatory authorities around UX design, technological mandates, privacy and other issues that go far beyond its expertise or mission;
3) creating a five-year Copyright Office review outside the legislative process;
4) making incremental changes to Section 1201 that don’t get at the ultimate problem that needs to be solved: the lack of a nexus to infringement requirement.

As you know, Re:Create always engages with you and your staff in good faith with a goal towards resolution. I am very thankful that I was invited as a witness to one of the hearings leading to the draft, and all the hard work of the team over the last year. Over the last five years, Re:Create and its members have engaged in good faith with real solutions to improving the Music Modernization Act, Felony Streaming, and the CASE Act.

In the end, for both the Music Modernization Act and Felony Streaming, Congress addressed our concerns in a way that worked for rights holders despite their attacks, and legislation was passed in the spirit of compromise. For CASE Act, we tried to negotiate in good faith around real solutions for a workable solution to deal with smaller claims. While ultimately that did not occur, all of these efforts have been made with an eye towards finding common ground and compromise to move forward.
Re:Create and our members have approached the attempts to refine the DMCA and the great work of the legislation’s drafters and their vision with an eye towards action. We want to continue to do so. However, as drafted the DCA repeals the DMCA and replaces it with a structurally unworkable solution that cannot be fixed.

While we appreciate the efforts of staff and Senator Tillis to create a comprehensive proposal to “reform” the DMCA, unfortunately, this draft is far from a workable starting point. However, we understand the concerns of the Office and will continue to work in good faith to ensure internet users, consumers, and creators are adequately represented.

Re:Create is hopeful that you will take this opportunity, listen to our concerns and produce a new framework that can be the basis for getting to a compromise.

Sincerely,

Joshua Lamel

Title: To amend title 17, United States Code, to update copyright law to address contemporary business practices and technologies and to support the growth of digital technologies without undermining incentives for creators, and for other purposes.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the “Digital Copyright Act of 2021”.

SEC. 2. LIMITATIONS ON LIABILITY RELATING TO MATERIAL ONLINE.

Section 512 of title 17, United States Code, is amended—

“(A) the provider’s transmitting, routing, or providing connections for, material through a system or network controlled or operated by or for the service provider, or by reason of the intermediate and transient storage of that material in the course of such transmitting, routing, or providing connections, if —

“(i) the transmission of the material was initiated by or at the direction of a person other than the service provider;

“(ii) the transmission, routing, provision of connections, or storage is carried out through an automatic technical process without selection of the material by the service provider;

“(iii) the service provider does not select the recipients of the material except as an automatic response to the request of another person;

“(iv) no copy of the material made by the service provider in the course of such intermediate or transient storage is maintained on the system or network in a manner ordinarily accessible to anyone other than anticipated recipients, and no such copy is maintained on the system or network in a manner ordinarily accessible to such anticipated recipients for a longer period than is reasonably necessary for the transmission, routing, or provision of connections; and

“(v) the material is transmitted through the system or network without modification of its content.

“(B) the intermediate and temporary storage of material on a system or network controlled or operated by or for the service provider in a case in which—

“(ii) the material is transmitted from the person described in subparagraph (i) through the system or network to a person other than the person described in subparagraph (i) at the direction of that other person; and

“(iii) the storage is carried out through an automatic technical process for the purpose of making the material available to users of the system or network who, after the material is transmitted as described in subparagraph (ii), request access to the material from the person described in subparagraph (iii).

“(C) storage at the direction of a user of material that resides on a system or network controlled or operated by or for the service provider[, or activities related to such storage].

or otherwise authorized by law, including that the use is permitted under section 107, the allegedly infringing materials stays down when:

“(aa) a complete or near complete copy of a copyrighted work already identified in a notification of claimed infringement or list of unauthorized works as provided in [XX], or

“(bb) any portion of a copyrighted work already identified in a notification of claimed infringement or list of unauthorized works as provided in [XX], if the service provider derives its commercial value predominantly from short-form media.; and

Such best practices may include standards such as requiring a user that uploads or publicly performs or displays content on or across the service to affirm that the user holds the copyright to that content, has permission to upload or publicly perform that content, or is otherwise authorized by law.

“(b) Notification.—

“(1) IN GENERAL.—To be effective under this subsection, a notification of claimed infringement submitted to a service provider, whether submitted by an individual or automated process, shall be a written communication provided to the designated agent of the service provider, as described in subsection (c), that includes substantially the following:

“(D) Information reasonably sufficient to permit the service provider to contact the complaining party, such as an address, telephone number, or electronic mail address at which the complaining party may be contacted.

“(b) Conditions for Eligibility.—

“(1) CONDITIONS.—

“(A) IN GENERAL.—Notwithstanding sections 502 through 506, and subject to subparagraph (B), in an action brought under this title for infringement of copyright in a work, the remedies for infringement shall be limited in accordance with subsection (c) if the infringer—

“(i) proves by a preponderance of the evidence that before the infringement began, the infringer, a person acting on behalf of the infringer, or any person jointly and severally liable with the infringer for the infringement—

“(2) REQUIREMENTS FOR SEARCHES.—

“(A) REQUIREMENTS FOR QUALIFYING SEARCHES.—

“(i) IN GENERAL.—A search qualifies under paragraph (1)(A)(i)(I) if the infringer, a person acting on behalf of the infringer, or any person jointly and severally liable with the infringer for the infringement, undertakes a diligent effort that is reasonable under the circumstances to locate the owner of the infringed copyright prior to, and at a time reasonably proximate to, the infringement.

“(I) requires, at a minimum—

“(aa) a search of the records of the Copyright Office that are available to the public through the Internet and relevant to identifying and locating copyright owners, provided there is sufficient identifying information on which to construct a search;

“(bb) a search of reasonably available sources of copyright authorship and ownership information and, where appropriate, licensor information;

review, as appropriate, of Copyright Office records not available to the public through the Internet that are reasonably likely to be useful in identifying and locating the copyright owner.

“(iii) CONSIDERATION OF RECOMMENDED PRACTICES.—A qualifying search under this subsection shall ordinarily be based on the applicable statement of Recommended Practices made available by the Copyright Office.

“(iv) LACK OF IDENTIFYING OF INFORMATION.—Each of the following circumstances shall not be considered to be sufficient to meet the conditions under paragraph (1)(A)(i)(I):

“(I) A particular copy or phonorecord lacks identifying information pertaining to the owner of the infringed copyright.

“(II) An owner of the infringed copyright fails to respond to any inquiry or other communication about the work.

“(v) USE OF RESOURCES FOR CHARGE.—A qualifying search under paragraph (1)(A)(i)(I) may require use of resources for which a charge or subscription is imposed to the extent reasonable under the circumstances.

“(vi) EFFECT OF FOREIGN SEARCHES.—If a search is found to be qualifying under the laws of a foreign jurisdiction, and this search is relied upon in part by a U.S. infringer, a court may take this fact into account when determining whether the United States search is qualifying, provided the foreign jurisdiction accepts qualifying United States searches in a reciprocal manner.

“(B) INFORMATION TO GUIDE SEARCHES; RECOMMENDED PRACTICES.—

“(i) STATEMENTS OF RECOMMENDED PRACTICES.—

“(I) IN GENERAL.—The Register of Copyrights shall maintain and make available to the public and, from time to time, update not less than 1

“(I) shall, in the discretion of the Register, consider materials, resources, databases, technology tools, and practices that are reasonable and relevant to the qualifying search; and “(II) may consider any comments submitted to the Copyright Office by any interested entities.

“(3) NOTICE OF USE ARCHIVE.—

“(A) IN GENERAL.—The Register of Copyrights shall create and maintain an archive to retain the Notices of Use filed under paragraph (1)(A)(ii).

“(B) CONTENTS.—Each Notice of Use filed under paragraph (1)(A)(ii) shall include—

“(v) the source of the work, including the library or archive in which the work was found, the publication in which the work originally appeared, the website from which the work was taken, (including the url and the date the site was accessed);

“(vi) a certification that the infringer performed a qualifying search in good faith under this subsection to locate the owner of the infringed copyright; and

“(vii) the name of the infringer and how the work will be used.

“(C) AVAILABILITY.—A Notice of Use filed under paragraph (1)(A)(ii) and retained under the control of the Copyright Office shall be made available to individuals or the public only under the conditions specified by regulations of the Copyright Office.

“(4) PENALTY FOR FAILURE TO COMPLY.—If an infringer fails to comply with any requirement under this subsection, the infringer shall not be eligible for a limitation on remedies under this section.

“(c) Limitations on Remedies.—The limitations on remedies in an action for infringement of a copyright to which this section applies are the following:

“(1) MONETARY RELIEF.—

“(3) A claim or counterclaim by or against a Federal or State governmental entity.

“(4) A claim or counterclaim asserted against a person or entity residing outside of the United States, except in a case in which the person or entity initiated the proceeding before the Copyright Claims Board and is subject to counterclaims under this chapter.

“(e) Permissible Remedies.—

“(1) MONETARY RECOVERY.—

“(A) ACTUAL DAMAGES, PROFITS, AND STATUTORY DAMAGES FOR INFRINGEMENT.—With respect to a claim or counterclaim for infringement of copyright, and subject to the limitation on total monetary recovery under subparagraph (D), the Copyright Claims Board may award either of the following:

“(i) Actual damages and profits determined in accordance with section 504(b), with that award taking into consideration, in appropriate cases, whether the infringing party has agreed to cease or mitigate the infringing activity under paragraph (2).

“(ii) Statutory damages, which shall be determined in accordance with section 504(c), subject to the following conditions:

“(I) With respect to works timely registered under section 412, so that the works are eligible for an award of statutory damages in accordance with that section, the statutory damages may not exceed $15,000 for each work infringed.

“(II) With respect to works not timely registered under section 412, but eligible for an award of statutory damages under this section, statutory damages may not exceed $7,500 per work infringed, or a total of $15,000 in any 1 proceeding.

“(III) The Copyright Claims Board may not make any finding that, or consider whether, the infringement was committed willfully in making an award of statutory damages.

“(IV) The Copyright Claims Board may consider, as an additional factor in awarding statutory damages, whether the infringer has agreed to cease or mitigate the infringing activity under paragraph (2).

“(B) ELECTION OF DAMAGES.—With respect to a claim or counterclaim of infringement, at any time before final determination is rendered, the claimant or counterclaimant shall, in accordance with the schedule established by the Copyright Claims Board under section 1506(k), elect—

“(i) to pursue actual damages and profits or statutory damages under subparagraph (A); or “(ii) not to pursue damages.

“(C) DAMAGES FOR OTHER CLAIMS.—Damages for claims and counterclaims other than infringement claims, such as those brought under section 512(f), shall be subject to the limitation under subparagraph (D).

“(D) LIMITATION ON TOTAL MONETARY RECOVERY.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, a party that pursues any 1 or more claims or counterclaims in any single proceeding before the Copyright Claims Board may not seek or recover in that proceeding a total monetary recovery that exceeds the sum of $30,000, exclusive of any attorneys’ fees and costs that may be awarded under section 1506(y)(2).

“(2) AGREEMENT TO CEASE CERTAIN ACTIVITY.—In a determination of the Copyright Claims Board, the Board shall include a requirement to cease conduct if, in the proceeding relating to the determination—

“(A) a party agrees—

“(i) to cease activity that is found to be infringing, including removing or disabling access to, or destroying, infringing materials; or

“(ii) to cease sending a takedown notice or counter notice under section 512 to the other party regarding the conduct at issue before the Board if that notice or counter notice was found to be a knowing material misrepresentation under section 512(f); and

“(B) the agreement described in subparagraph (A) is reflected in the record for the proceeding.

“(3) ATTORNEYS’ FEES AND COSTS.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, except in the case of bad faith conduct as provided in section 1506(y)(2), the parties to proceedings before the Copyright Claims Board shall bear their own attorneys’ fees and costs.

“(f) Joint and Several Liability.—Parties to a proceeding before the Copyright Claims Board may be found jointly and severally liable if all such parties and relevant claims or counterclaims arise from the same activity or activities.

“(g) Permissible Number of Cases.—The Register of Copyrights may establish regulations relating to the permitted number of proceedings each year by the same claimant under this chapter, in the interests of justice and the administration of the Copyright Claims Board.

“1505. Registration requirement

“(a) Application or Certificate.—A claim or counterclaim alleging infringement of an exclusive right in a copyrighted work may not be asserted before the Copyright Claims Board unless—

“(1) the legal or beneficial owner of the copyright has first delivered a completed application, a deposit, and the required fee for registration of the copyright to the Copyright Office; and

“(2) a registration certificate has either been issued or has not been refused.

“(b) Certificate of Registration.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, a claimant or counterclaimant in a proceeding before the Copyright Claims Board shall be eligible to recover actual damages and profits or statutory damages under this chapter for infringement of a work if the requirements of subsection (a) have been met, except that—

“(1) the Copyright Claims Board may not render a determination in the proceeding until—

“(A) a registration certificate with respect to the work has been issued by the Copyright Office, submitted to the Copyright Claims Board, and made available to the other parties to the proceeding; and

“(B) the other parties to the proceeding have been provided an opportunity to address the registration certificate;

“(2) if the proceeding may not proceed further because a registration certificate for the work is pending, the proceeding shall be held in abeyance pending submission of the certificate to the Copyright Claims Board, except that, if the proceeding is held in abeyance for more than 1 year, the Copyright Claims Board may, upon providing written notice to the parties to the proceeding, and 30 days to the parties to respond to the notice, dismiss the proceeding without prejudice; and

“(3) if the Copyright Claims Board receives notice that registration with respect to the work has been refused, the proceeding shall be dismissed without prejudice.

“(c) Presumption.—In a case in which a registration certificate shows that registration with respect to a work was issued not later than 5 years after the date of the first publication of the work, the presumption under section 410(c) shall apply in a proceeding before the Copyright Claims Board, in addition to relevant principles of law under this title.

“(d) Regulations.—In order to ensure that actions before the Copyright Claims Board proceed in a timely manner, the Register of Copyrights shall establish regulations allowing the Copyright Office to make a decision, on an expedited basis, to issue or deny copyright registration for an unregistered work that is at issue before the Board.
“1506. Conduct of proceedings

“(a) In General.—

“(1) APPLICABLE LAW.—Proceedings of the Copyright Claims Board shall be conducted in accordance with this chapter and regulations established by the Register of Copyrights under this chapter, in addition to relevant principles of law under this title.

“(2) CONFLICTING PRECEDENT.—If it appears that there may be conflicting judicial precedent on an issue of substantive copyright law that cannot be reconciled, the Copyright Claims Board shall follow the law of the Federal jurisdiction in which the action could have been brought if filed in a district court of the United States, or, if the action could have been brought in more than 1 such jurisdiction, the jurisdiction that the Copyright Claims Board determines has the most significant ties to the parties and conduct at issue.

“(b) Record.—The Copyright Claims Board shall maintain records documenting the proceedings before the Board.

“(c) Centralized Process.—Proceedings before the Copyright Claims Board shall—

“(1) be conducted at the offices of the Copyright Claims Board without the requirement of in-person appearances by parties or others; and

“(2) take place by means of written submissions, hearings, and conferences carried out through internet-based applications and other telecommunications facilities, except that, in cases in which physical or other nontestimonial evidence material to a proceeding cannot be furnished to the Copyright Claims Board through available telecommunications facilities, the Copyright Claims Board may make alternative arrangements for the submission of such evidence that do not prejudice any other party to the proceeding.

“(d) Representation.—A party to a proceeding before the Copyright Claims Board may be, but is not required to be, represented by—

“(1) an attorney; or

“(2) a law student who is qualified under applicable law governing representation by law students of parties in legal proceedings and who provides such representation on a pro bono basis.

“(e) Commencement of Proceeding.—In order to commence a proceeding under this chapter, a claimant shall, subject to such additional requirements as may be prescribed in regulations established by the Register of Copyrights, file a claim with the Copyright Claims Board, that—

“(1) includes a statement of material facts in support of the claim;

“(2) is certified under subsection (y)(1); and

“(3) is accompanied by a filing fee in such amount as may be prescribed in regulations established by the Register of Copyrights.

“(f) Review of Claims and Counterclaims.—

“(1) CLAIMS.—Upon the filing of a claim under subsection (e), the claim shall be reviewed by a Copyright Claims Attorney to ensure that the claim complies with this chapter and applicable regulations, subject to the following:
“(A) If the claim is found to comply, the claimant shall be notified regarding that compliance and instructed to proceed with service of the claim under subsection (g).

“(B) If the claim is found not to comply, the claimant shall be notified that the claim is deficient and be permitted to file an amended claim not later than 30 days after the date on which the claimant receives the notice, without the requirement of an additional filing fee. If the claimant files a compliant claim within that 30-day period, the claimant shall be so notified and be instructed to proceed with service of the claim. If the claim is refiled within that 30-day period and still fails to comply, the claimant shall again be notified that the claim is deficient and shall be provided a second opportunity to amend the claim not later than 30 days after the date of that second notice, without the requirement of an additional filing fee. If the claim is refiled again within that second 30-day period and is compliant, the claimant shall be so notified and shall be instructed to proceed with service of the claim, but if the claim still fails to comply, upon confirmation of such noncompliance by a Copyright Claims Officer, the proceeding shall be dismissed without prejudice. The Copyright Claims Board shall also dismiss without prejudice any proceeding in which a compliant claim is not filed within the applicable 30-day period.

“(C)(i) Subject to clause (ii), for purposes of this paragraph, a claim against an online service provider for infringement by reason of the storage of or referral or linking to infringing material that may be subject to the limitations on liability set forth in subsection (b), (c), or (d) of section 512 shall be considered noncompliant unless the claimant affirms in the statement required under subsection (e)(1) of this section that the claimant has previously notified the service provider of the claimed infringement in accordance with subsection (b)(2)(E), (c)(3), or (d)(3) of section 512, as applicable, and the service provider failed to remove or disable access to the material expeditiously upon the provision of such notice.

“(ii) If a claim is found to be noncompliant under clause (i), the Copyright Claims Board shall provide the claimant with information concerning the service of such a notice under the applicable provision of section 512.

“(2) COUNTERCLAIMS.—Upon the filing and service of a counterclaim, the counterclaim shall be reviewed by a Copyright Claims Attorney to ensure that the counterclaim complies with the provisions of this chapter and applicable regulations. If the counterclaim is found not to comply, the counterclaimant and the other parties to the proceeding shall be notified that the counterclaim is deficient, and the counterclaimant shall be permitted to file and serve an amended counterclaim not later than 30 days after the date of such notice. If the counterclaimant files and serves a compliant counterclaim within that 30-day period, the counterclaimant and such other parties shall be so notified. If the counterclaim is refiled and served within that 30-day period but still fails to comply, the counterclaimant and such other parties shall again be notified that the counterclaim is deficient, and the counterclaimant shall be provided a second opportunity to amend the counterclaim not later than 30 days after the date of the second notice. If the counterclaim is refiled and served again within that second 30-day period and is compliant, the counterclaimant and such other parties shall be so notified, but if the counterclaim still fails to comply, upon confirmation of such noncompliance by a Copyright Claims Officer, the counterclaim, but not the proceeding, shall be dismissed without prejudice.
“(3) DISMISSAL OF UNSUITABILITY.—The Copyright Claims Board shall dismiss a claim or counterclaim without prejudice if, upon reviewing the claim or counterclaim, or at any other time in the proceeding, the Copyright Claims Board concludes that the claim or counterclaim is unsuitable for determination by the Copyright Claims Board, including on account of any of the following:

“(A) The failure to join a necessary party.

“(B) The lack of an essential witness, evidence, or expert testimony.

“(C) The determination of a relevant issue of law or fact that could exceed either the number of proceedings the Copyright Claims Board could reasonably administer or the subject matter competence of the Copyright Claims Board.

“(g) Service of Notice and Claims.—In order to proceed with a claim against a respondent, a claimant shall, not later than 90 days after receiving notification under subsection (f) to proceed with service, file with the Copyright Claims Board proof of service on the respondent. In order to effectuate service on a respondent, the claimant shall cause notice of the proceeding and a copy of the claim to be served on the respondent, either by personal service or pursuant to a waiver of personal service, as prescribed in regulations established by the Register of Copyrights. Such regulations shall include the following requirements:

“(1) The notice of the proceeding shall adhere to a prescribed form and shall set forth the nature of the Copyright Claims Board and proceeding, the right of the respondent to opt out, and the consequences of opting out and not opting out, including a prominent statement that, by not opting out within 60 days after receiving the notice, the respondent—

“(A) loses the opportunity to have the dispute decided by a court created under article III of the Constitution of the United States; and “(B) waives the right to a jury trial regarding the dispute.

“(2) The copy of the claim served on the respondent shall be the same as the claim that was filed with the Copyright Claims Board.

“(3) Personal service of a notice and claim may be effected by an individual who is not a party to the proceeding and is older than 18 years of age.

“(4) An individual, other than a minor or incompetent individual, may be served by—

“(A) complying with State law for serving a summons in an action brought in courts of general jurisdiction in the State where service is made;

“(B) delivering a copy of the notice and claim to the individual personally;

“(C) leaving a copy of the notice and claim at the individual’s dwelling or usual place of abode with someone of suitable age and discretion who resides there; or

“(D) delivering a copy of the notice and claim to an agent designated by the respondent to receive service of process or, if not so designated, an agent authorized by appointment or by law to receive service of process.

“(5)(A) A corporation, partnership, or unincorporated association that is subject to suit in courts of general jurisdiction under a common name shall be served by delivering a copy of the notice and claim to its service agent. If such service agent has not been designated, service shall be accomplished—

“(i) by complying with State law for serving a summons in an action brought in courts of general jurisdiction in the State where service is made; or “(ii) by delivering a copy of the notice and claim to an officer, a managing or general agent, or any other agent authorized by appointment or by law to receive service of process in an action brought in courts of general jurisdiction in the State where service is made and, if the agent is one authorized by statute and the statute so requires, by also mailing a copy of the notice and claim to the respondent.

“(B) A corporation, partnership, or unincorporated association that is subject to suit in courts of general jurisdiction under a common name may elect to designate a service agent to receive notice of a claim against it before the Copyright Claims Board by complying with requirements that the Register of Copyrights shall establish by regulation. The Register of Copyrights shall maintain a current directory of service agents that is available to the public for inspection, including through the internet, and may require such corporations, partnerships, and unincorporated associations designating such service agents to pay a fee to cover the costs of maintaining the directory.

“(6) In order to request a waiver of personal service, the claimant may notify a respondent, by first class mail or by other reasonable means, that a proceeding has been commenced, such notice to be made in accordance with regulations established by the Register of Copyrights, subject to the following:

“(A) Any such request shall be in writing, shall be addressed to the respondent, and shall be accompanied by a prescribed notice of the proceeding, a copy of the claim as filed with the Copyright Claims Board, a prescribed form for waiver of personal service, and a prepaid or other means of returning the form without cost.

“(B) The request shall state the date on which the request is sent, and shall provide the respondent a period of 30 days, beginning on the date on which the request is sent, to return the waiver form signed by the respondent. The signed waiver form shall, for purposes of this subsection, constitute acceptance and proof of service as of the date on which the waiver is signed.

“(7)(A) A respondent’s waiver of personal service shall not constitute a waiver of the respondent’s right to opt out of the proceeding.

“(B) A respondent who timely waives personal service under paragraph (6) and does not opt out of the proceeding shall be permitted a period of 30 days, in addition to the period otherwise permitted under the applicable procedures of the Copyright Claims Board, to submit a substantive response to the claim, including any defenses and counterclaims.

“(8) A minor or an incompetent individual may only be served by complying with State law for serving a summons or like process on such an individual in an action brought in the courts of general jurisdiction of the State where service is made.

“(9) Service of a claim and waiver of personal service may only be effected within the United States.

“(h) Notification by Copyright Claims Board.—The Register of Copyrights shall establish regulations providing for a written notification to be sent by, or on behalf of, the Copyright Claims Board to notify the respondent of a pending proceeding against the respondent, as set forth in those regulations, which shall—

“(1) include information concerning the respondent’s right to opt out of the proceeding, the consequences of opting out and not opting out, and a prominent statement that, by not opting out within 60 days after the date of service under subsection (g), the respondent loses the opportunity to have the dispute decided by a court created under article III of the Constitution of the United States and waives the right to a jury trial regarding the dispute; and

“(2) be in addition to, and separate and apart from, the notice requirements under subsection (g).

“(i) Opt-Out Procedure.—Upon being properly served with a notice and claim, a respondent who chooses to opt out of the proceeding shall have a period of 60 days, beginning on the date of service, in which to provide written notice of such choice to the Copyright Claims Board, in accordance with regulations established by the Register of Copyrights. If proof of service has been filed by the claimant and the respondent does not submit an opt-out notice to the Copyright Claims Board within that 60-day period, the proceeding shall be deemed an active proceeding and the respondent shall be bound by the determination in the proceeding to the extent provided under section 1507(a). If the respondent opts out of the proceeding during that 60-day period, the proceeding shall be dismissed without prejudice, except that, in exceptional circumstances and upon written notice to the claimant, the Copyright Claims Board may extend that 60-day period in the interests of justice.

“(j) Service of Other Documents.—Documents submitted or relied upon in a proceeding, other than the notice and claim, shall be served in accordance with regulations established by the Register of Copyrights.

“(k) Scheduling.—Upon confirmation that a proceeding has become an active proceeding, the Copyright Claims Board shall issue a schedule for the future conduct of the proceeding. A schedule issued by the Copyright Claims Board may be amended by the Copyright Claims Board in the interests of justice.

“(l) Conferences.—One or more Copyright Claims Officers may hold a conference to address case management or discovery issues in a proceeding, which shall be noted upon the record of the proceeding and may be recorded or transcribed.

“(m) Party Submissions.—A proceeding of the Copyright Claims Board may not include any formal motion practice, except that, subject to applicable regulations and procedures of the Copyright Claims Board—

“(1) the parties to the proceeding may make requests to the Copyright Claims Board to address case management and discovery matters, and submit responses thereto; and

“(2) the Copyright Claims Board may request or permit parties to make submissions addressing relevant questions of fact or law, or other matters, including matters raised sua sponte by the Copyright Claims Officers, and offer responses thereto.

“(n) Discovery.—Discovery in a proceeding shall be limited to the production of relevant information and documents, written interrogatories, and written requests for admission, as provided in regulations established by the Register of Copyrights, except that—
“(1) upon the request of a party, and for good cause shown, the Copyright Claims Board may approve additional relevant discovery, on a limited basis, in particular matters, and may request specific information and documents from participants in the proceeding and voluntary submissions from nonparticipants, consistent with the interests of justice;

“(2) upon the request of a party, and for good cause shown, the Copyright Claims Board may issue a protective order to limit the disclosure of documents or testimony that contain confidential information; and

“(3) after providing notice and an opportunity to respond, and upon good cause shown, the Copyright Claims Board may apply an adverse inference with respect to disputed facts against a party who has failed to timely provide discovery materials in response to a proper request for materials that could be relevant to such facts.

“(o) Evidence.—The Copyright Claims Board may consider the following types of evidence in a proceeding, and such evidence may be admitted without application of formal rules of evidence:

“(1) Documentary and other nontestimonial evidence that is relevant to the claims, counterclaims, or defenses in the proceeding.

“(2) Testimonial evidence, submitted under penalty of perjury in written form or in accordance with subsection (p), limited to statements of the parties and nonexpert witnesses, that is relevant to the claims, counterclaims, and defenses in a proceeding, except that, in exceptional cases, expert witness testimony or other types of testimony may be permitted by the Copyright Claims Board for good cause shown.

“(p) Hearings.—The Copyright Claims Board may conduct a hearing to receive oral presentations on issues of fact or law from parties and witnesses to a proceeding, including oral testimony, subject to the following:

“(1) Any such hearing shall be attended by not fewer than 2 of the Copyright Claims Officers.

“(2) The hearing shall be noted upon the record of the proceeding and, subject to paragraph (3), may be recorded or transcribed as deemed necessary by the Copyright Claims Board.

“(3) A recording or transcript of the hearing shall be made available to any Copyright Claims Officer who is not in attendance.

“(q) Voluntary Dismissal.—

“(1) BY CLAIMANT.—Upon the written request of a claimant that is received before a respondent files a response to the claim in a proceeding, the Copyright Claims Board shall dismiss the proceeding, or a claim or respondent, as requested, without prejudice.

“(2) BY COUNTERCLAIMANT.—Upon written request of a counterclaimant that is received before a claimant files a response to the counterclaim, the Copyright Claims Board shall dismiss the counterclaim, such dismissal to be without prejudice.

“(3) CLASS ACTIONS.—Any party in an active proceeding before the Copyright Claims Board who receives notice of a pending or putative class action, arising out of the same transaction or occurrence, in which that party is a class member may request in writing dismissal of the proceeding before the Board. Upon notice to all claimants and counterclaimants, the Copyright Claims Board shall dismiss the proceeding without prejudice.

“(r) Settlement.—

“(1) IN GENERAL.—At any time in an active proceeding, some or all of the parties may—

“(A) jointly request a conference with a Copyright Claims Officer for the purpose of facilitating settlement discussions; or

“(B) submit to the Copyright Claims Board an agreement providing for settlement and dismissal of some or all of the claims and counterclaims in the proceeding.

“(2) ADDITIONAL REQUEST.—A submission under paragraph (1)(B) may include a request that the Copyright Claims Board adopt some or all of the terms of the parties’ settlement in a final determination in the proceeding.

“(s) Factual Findings.—Subject to subsection (n)(3), the Copyright Claims Board shall make factual findings based upon a preponderance of the evidence.

“(t) Determinations.—

“(1) NATURE AND CONTENTS.—A determination rendered by the Copyright Claims Board in a proceeding shall—

“(A) be reached by a majority of the Copyright Claims Board;

“(B) be in writing, and include an explanation of the factual and legal basis of the determination;

“(C) set forth any terms by which a respondent or counterclaim respondent has agreed to cease infringing activity under section 1504(e)(2);

“(D) to the extent requested under subsection (r)(2), set forth the terms of any settlement agreed to under subsection (r)(1); and “(E) include a clear statement of all damages and other relief awarded, including under subparagraphs (C) and (D).

“(2) DISSERT.—A Copyright Claims Officer who dissents from a decision contained in a determination under paragraph (1) may append a statement setting forth the grounds for that dissent.

“(3) PUBLICATION.—Each final determination of the Copyright Claims Board shall be made available on a publicly accessible website. The Register shall establish regulations with respect to the publication of other records and information relating to such determinations, including the redaction of records to protect confidential information that is the subject of a protective order under subsection (n)(2).

“(4) FREEDOM OF INFORMATION ACT.—All information relating to proceedings of the Copyright Claims Board under this chapter is exempt from disclosure to the public under section 552(b)(3) of title 5, except for determinations, records, and information published under paragraph (3).

“(u) Respondent’s Default.—If a proceeding has been deemed an active proceeding but the respondent has failed to appear or has ceased participating in the proceeding, as demonstrated by the respondent’s failure, without justifiable cause, to meet 1 or more deadlines or requirements set forth in the schedule adopted by the Copyright Claims Board under subsection (k), the Copyright Claims Board may enter a default determination, including the dismissal of any counterclaim asserted by the respondent, as follows and in accordance with such other requirements as the Register of Copyrights may establish by regulation:

“(1) The Copyright Claims Board shall require the claimant to submit relevant evidence and other information in support of the claimant’s claim and any asserted damages and, upon review of such evidence and any other requested submissions from the claimant, shall determine whether the materials so submitted are sufficient to support a finding in favor of the claimant under applicable law and, if so, the appropriate relief and damages, if any, to be awarded.

“(2) If the Copyright Claims Board makes an affirmative determination under paragraph (1), the Copyright Claims Board shall prepare a proposed default determination, and shall provide written notice to the respondent at all addresses, including email addresses, reflected in the records of the proceeding before the Copyright Claims Board, of the pendency of a default determination by the Copyright Claims Board and of the legal significance of such determination. Such notice shall be accompanied by the proposed default determination and shall provide that the respondent has a period of 30 days, beginning on the date of the notice, to submit any evidence or other information in opposition to the proposed default determination.

“(3) If the respondent responds to the notice provided under paragraph (2) within the 30-day period provided in such paragraph, the Copyright Claims Board shall consider the respondent’s submissions and, after allowing the other parties to address such submissions, maintain, or amend its proposed determination as appropriate, and the resulting determination shall not be a default determination.

“(4) If the respondent fails to respond to the notice provided under paragraph (2), the Copyright Claims Board shall proceed to issue the default determination as a final determination. Thereafter, the respondent may only challenge such determination to the extent permitted under section 1508(c), except that, before any additional proceedings are initiated under section 1508, the Copyright Claims Board may, in the interests of justice, vacate the default determination.

“(v) Claimant’s Failure To Proceed.—

“(1) FAILURE TO COMPLETE SERVICE.—If a claimant fails to complete service on a respondent within the 90-day period required under subsection (g), the Copyright Claims Board shall dismiss that respondent from the proceeding without prejudice. If a claimant fails to complete service on all respondents within that 90-day period, the Copyright Claims Board shall dismiss the proceeding without prejudice.

“(2) FAILURE TO PROSECUTE.—If a claimant fails to proceed in an active proceeding, as demonstrated by the claimant’s failure, without justifiable cause, to meet 1 or more deadlines or requirements set forth in the schedule adopted by the Copyright Claims Board under subsection (k), the Copyright Claims Board may, upon providing written notice to the claimant and a period of 30 days, beginning on the date of the notice, to respond to the notice, and after considering any such response, issue a determination dismissing the claimant’s claims, which shall include an award of attorneys’ fees and costs, if appropriate, under subsection (y)(2). Thereafter, the claimant may only challenge such determination to the extent permitted under section 1508(c), except that, before any additional proceedings are initiated under section 1508, the Copyright Claims Board may, in the interests of justice, vacate the determination of dismissal.

“(w) Request for Reconsideration.—A party may, not later than 30 days after the date on which the Copyright Claims Board issues a final determination in a proceeding under this chapter, submit a written request for reconsideration of, or an amendment to, such determination if the party identifies a clear error of law or fact material to the outcome, or a technical mistake.
After providing the other parties an opportunity to address such request, the Copyright Claims Board shall either deny the request or issue an amended final determination.

“(x) Review by Register.—If the Copyright Claims Board denies a party a request for reconsideration of a final determination under subsection (w), that party may, not later than 30 days after the date of such denial, request review of the final determination by the Register of Copyrights in accordance with regulations established by the Register. Such request shall be accompanied by a reasonable filing fee, as provided in such regulations. The review by the Register shall be limited to consideration of whether the Copyright Claims Board abused its discretion in denying reconsideration of the determination. After providing the other parties an opportunity to address the request, the Register shall either deny the request for review, or remand the proceeding to the Copyright Claims Board for reconsideration of issues specified in the remand and for issuance of an amended final determination. Such amended final determination shall not be subject to further consideration or review, other than under section 1508(c).

“(y) Conduct of Parties and Attorneys.—

“(1) Certification.—The Register of Copyrights shall establish regulations requiring certification of the accuracy and truthfulness of statements made by participants in proceedings before the Copyright Claims Board.

“(2) Bad Faith Conduct.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, in any proceeding in which a determination is rendered and it is established that a party pursued a claim, counterclaim, or defense for a harassing or other improper purpose, or without a reasonable basis in law or fact, then, unless inconsistent with the interests of justice, the Copyright Claims Board shall in such determination award reasonable attorneys’ fees and costs to any adversely affected party of in an amount of not more than $5,000, except that—

“(A) if an adversely affected party appeared pro se in the proceeding, the award to that party shall be for costs only, in an amount of not more than $2,500; and “(B) in extraordinary circumstances, such as where a party has demonstrated a pattern or practice of bad faith conduct as described in this paragraph, the Copyright Claims Board may, in the interests of justice, award costs in excess of the limitations under this paragraph.

“(3) Additional Penalty.—If the Board finds that on more than 1 occasion within a 12-month period a party pursued a claim, counterclaim, or defense before the Copyright Claims Board for a harassing or other improper purpose, or without a reasonable basis in law or fact, that party shall be barred from initiating a claim before the Copyright Claims Board under this chapter for a period of 12 months beginning on the date on which the Board makes such a finding. Any proceeding commenced by that party that is still pending before the Board when such a finding is made shall be dismissed without prejudice, except that if a proceeding has been deemed active under subsection (i), the proceeding shall be dismissed under this paragraph only if the respondent provides written consent thereto.

“(z) Regulations for Smaller Claims.—The Register of Copyrights shall establish regulations to provide for the consideration and determination, by not less than 1 Copyright Claims Officer, of any claim under this chapter in which total damages sought do not exceed $5,000 (exclusive of attorneys’ fees and costs). A determination issued under this subsection shall have the same effect as a determination issued by the entire Copyright Claims Board.

“1507. Effect of proceeding

“(a) Determination.—Subject to the reconsideration and review processes provided under subsections (w) and (x) of section 1506 and section 1508(c), the issuance of a final determination by the Copyright Claims Board in a proceeding, including a default determination or determination based on a failure to prosecute, shall, solely with respect to the parties to such determination, preclude relitigation before any court or tribunal, or before the Copyright Claims Board, of the claims and counterclaims asserted and finally determined by the Board, and may be relied upon for such purpose in a future action or proceeding arising from the same specific activity or activities, subject to the following:

“(1) A determination of the Copyright Claims Board shall not preclude litigation or relitigation as between the same or different parties before any court or tribunal, or the Copyright Claims Board, of the same or similar issues of fact or law in connection with claims or counterclaims not asserted or not finally determined by the Copyright Claims Board.

“(2) A determination of ownership of a copyrighted work for purposes of resolving a matter before the Copyright Claims Board may not be relied upon, and shall not have any preclusive effect, in any other action or proceeding before any court or tribunal, including the Copyright Claims Board.

“(3) Except to the extent permitted under this subsection and section 1508, any determination of the Copyright Claims Board may not be cited or relied upon as legal precedent in any other action or proceeding before any court or tribunal, including the Copyright Claims Board.

“(b) Class Actions Not Affected.—

JUST HOW SMALL ARE THESE “SMALL CLAIMS”?

• The maximum that a party may seek and recover in a single claim in the CCB is $30,000 (exclusive of attorneys’ fees/costs).

• The Act also provides for the Copyright Office to establish regulations for “smaller claims” proceedings for claims for no more than $5,000.
Two types of remedies are possible in CCB proceedings:

- Damages
  - Actual damages and profits (capped at $30,000); or
  - Statutory damages for infringement
    - For works timely registered: up to $15,000/work or $30,000/proceeding
    - Otherwise: up to $7,500/work or $15,000/proceeding

- Requirements to cease activity*
ARE ATTORNEYS’ FEES AVAILABLE?

- The parties are to bear their own attorneys’ fees and costs unless there is evidence of bad faith conduct.
- Even then, fees/costs will be capped at $5,000 absent extraordinary circumstances.
- Repeated bad faith conduct can get a party banned from bringing claims for a year.
DOES A CLAIMANT’S WORK NEED TO BE REGISTERED?

• Yes and no.
• A claimant may file based on a pending application, but a decision will not be rendered until the registration issues.
• The Act contemplates the Copyright Office establishing regulations that allow for expedited processing of applications for works that are at issue before the CCB.
ARE CCB PROCEEDINGS MANDATORY?

- Participation in a CCB proceeding is voluntary and would-be respondents will have the opportunity to opt out. If a putative respondent opts out, the claimant may pursue its claim in court.
A party can request reconsideration in the event of clear error of law or fact material to the outcome, or a technical mistake. If that request is denied, it may request a review of the final determination by the Register of Copyrights.

The Register’s review will be limited to whether the CCB abused its discretion in denying reconsideration.

If the Register does not provide the requested relief, the party may bring a challenge to a district court: (i) if the determination was the result of fraud, corruption, misrepresentation, or other misconduct; (ii) if the CCB exceeded its authority or failed to render a final determination; or (iii) if the determination was based on a default or failure to prosecute due to excusable neglect.

After exhausting the foregoing challenges (or after the window to do so expires), the decision of the CCB will become final and the parties will be precluded from re-litigating the same claims before any court, tribunal or the CCB again.

However, the same parties will be allowed to litigate similar issues of fact or law in court or any tribunal even if they were connected to the claims raised in the CCB proceeding, as long as they were not actually raised.
• No and no.
• Determinations by the CCB should not be cited or relied upon as legal precedent or any other action or proceeding before any court, tribunal or even the CCB (except to enforce the determination).
• A determination of ownership of a copyrighted work in a CCB case may not be relied upon or have preclusive effect in any other action or proceeding before the CCB, court or other tribunal.
